IMPURE WATER

PROPAGATES

CHOLERA, TYPHOID AND MALARIOUS FEVERS,

AND MANY OTHER DISEASES.

MAIGNEN'S PATENT "FILTRE RAPIDE"

Is guaranteed to remove from Water all the Cholera and Typhoid Bacilli. Also to decompose and arrest dissolved organic matter. Water, to which were added 221,728 cholera bacilli per cubic centimetre (that is 221 millions per litre), was filtered through a "Filtre Rapide," and afterwards it did not contain a single cholera bacillus.

THIS IS THE FILTER WHICH WAS USED BY THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE SOUDAN.

Testimonial from VISCOUNT GENERAL WOLSELEY:—"It filtered the water both quickly and well, and was much valued by our soldiers."

THIS IS THE FILTER WHICH HAS RECEIVED ALL THE HIGHEST AWARDS

At the Fisheries, Health, Inventions, and Colonial EXHIBITIONS.

(Visitors to South Kensington will remember Maignen's Drinking Fountains in the Gardens.)

WHAT CHARACTERISES THIS FILTER.

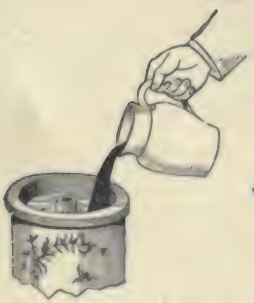
I. GREAT EFFICACY, as it eliminates from water not only ordinary dirt, but also disease germs, dissolved organic matter, metallic impurities, and noxious gases.

II. Facility for cleansing and renewing the filtering medium, so that it is maintained ever new at a most trifling expense by the users themselves in whatever part of the world they may be.

DOMESTIC "COTTAGE" AND "BIJOU D" "FILTRE RAPIDE."

In this filter the water goes through a body of granular Carbo-calcis, a layer of powdered Carbo-calcis, and pure asbestos cloth.

FOR HOME AND COUNTRY ECONOMICAL "FILTRE RAPIDE."



This filter, which is very cheap indeed, is put into the pail and syphons into the decanter or another pail; only Carbo-calcis is used in this filter, but it is renewed more often.

FOR HOT CLIMATES, AUSTRALIAN "BUSH" "FILTRE RAPIDE."

This was designed with a canvas bucket as reservoir, to cool the filtered water.

SECTIONS.

SETTING.

CLEANSING.

Fountain "Filtre Rapide," specially designed for Schools, Hospitals, Barracks, Ships, Railway Stations, Clubs, Hotels, Restaurants, and Private Residences.

Containing 6, 12, 18, and 24 gallons of water, of which one quarter is filtered, can be filled by hand, or attached to the main by means of a ball-cock.

Maignen's patent Carbo-calcis used in the "Filtre Rapide" does remove a portion of the lime that may be in the water, but to remove it all, you should use Maignen's Patent Anti-Calcaire.

TO SOFTEN HARD WATER

USE

MAIGNEN'S PATENT ANTI-CALCAIRE.

"Quite harmless and inexpensive," says the Queen, "for the complexion, the hands, the hair, for cooking and drinking, making tea and coffee, washing linen, preventing gout and rheumatism, also to prevent incrustation in boilers, and hot water pipes."

Sold in Tins at 2d. 6d. 1/- 2/- 3/6 7/-, also in Casks.

Automatic Apparatus for Boilers.

MAIGNEN'S FILTRE RAPIDE & ANTI-CALCAIRE Co., Lim., 32 St. Mary-at-Hill, London, E.C.

THE COMMERCIAL DEVELOPMENT OF AUSTRALASIA.

By J. W. MEADEN.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Just a century ago, in the year 1788, the first English settlers landed upon the shores of the continent of Australia. These were mainly exiled outcasts, who came in bonds to found a home for freedom. They brought with them amidst their sins, their sorrows, and their shame, some better things, some characteristics of the race from which they had been roughly separated by the hand of justice. The rude outlines which they marked out upon these then savage coasts were traced in accordance with the traditions of the land from which they came, and from which were drawn in after years the true founders of Australasia; for these convict settlers were not the fathers of the communities which now flourish under the Southern Cross. They were pioneers, few in number, and destined soon to lose their individuality amidst the great waves of voluntary immigration that followed in their wake. With their coming, however, commences the history of Australasia, which, like mighty Rome, began as an asylum for law-breakers. The close of Australasia's first century of national life is a fitting time to glance at the material progress which has been achieved within its confines. In doing this it will not be necessary to enter into a detailed account of the voyages and explorations by which the discovery of Australia was effected, or to speculate on the causes which led to its settlement. That the existence of this continent had long been known to voyagers of several nations there is abundant evidence to show. The Chinese from time immemorial have had some traditions concerning a Great South Land. The name of the first European who visited Australia is not known, but claims for that honour have been made on behalf of several early explorers. Paulmier de Gonneville was in southern latitudes in 1504, but it is by the best authorities supposed that Madagascar was the unknown land which he sighted. A better claim has been made on behalf of Guillaume le Teshi, also a Frenchman, whose name appears in a map now in the British Museum, bearing date 1542, in which a large tract of country, described as Great Java, corresponds in outline and position with the north coast of Australia. In 1606 the Spanish Admiral, De Quiros, accompanied by Luis Vaes de Torres, appeared in our northern waters, but, though he touched at New Guinea, he missed the continent. From 1616 to 1650 several Dutch navigators, including Dirk Hartog and Abel Tasman, were in the neighbourhood of Australia, and even landed on its shores. In 1801, on an island at the entrance to Shark's Bay on the west coast of the continent, was found a metal plate, bearing an inscription in Dutch, which has been thus translated:—

"YEAR 1616. OCTOBER 25
ARRIVED HERE THE SHIP
ENDRAGHT OF AMSTERDAM.
FIRST MERCHANT, GILLIS MIEBAIS OF LUIK
DIRK HARTOG, OF AMSTERDAM, CAPTAIN.
THEY SAILED HENCE FOR BANTAM THE 22ND DITTO."

A record of Dirk Hartog's discoveries is found in a map by Eessel Gerretts, A.D. 1627. Considerable curiosity as to the character of this new land was aroused, with the result that some knowledge of the coast was gradually obtained, and a misty outline of Hollandia Nova appeared in certain charts. In the Cartas de Indias, publicadas por primera vez, del Ministerio de Fomento, a copy of which may be found in the Melbourne Public Library, is a curious old Map a de la Australia, etched by a Jesuit missionary, Fray Marcelo Anseldo, dated 1669.

Notwithstanding the fact that some intimation of the existence of this Fifth Continent had reached the European nations at an earlier date, we are still justified in regarding the year 1770, when Captain James Cook first visited our eastern coast, as the time when, for practical purposes, Australia was discovered. Cook landed, and, aided by Sir Joseph Banks and Dr. Solander, noted its fauna and flora. The vivid accounts carried home by these explorers of the capabilities of these new-found lands insured their speedy occupation. The loss of the American colonies hastened the important event; America being no longer available as a receptacle for th transported criminals of the United Kingdom, the Government, influenced by the favourabl reports of the climate and resources of Australia, choose it as a home for convicts. Botan Bay, so called from the luxuriance of wild flowers abounding where Cook landed, was made convict settlement. The arrival of the expedition is thus recorded by Col. Collins, who cam out in this first fleet. His words indicate the feeling of apprehension with which the voyager regarded their adventurous journey. "Thus, under the blessing of God, was happily completed in eight months and one week (the whole fleet being safe at anchor on the 20th of January 1788), a voyage which, before it was undertaken, the mind hardly dared venture to contemplate and on which it was impossible to reflect without some apprehension as to its termination." The long and tedious journey of the convict fleet was happily unattended by any great fatality and of the 1,044 who embarked, all but 14 landed in safety. The number was made up a follows:—Civil officers, 10; military officers and privates, 212; wives and children, 45; other fre persons, 81; convicts, 696. The convicts were chiefly young persons from the agricultura districts, comparatively few of whom had been indicted for serious offences, some of them fo poaching and petty larceny. Owing to its greater suitability, Port Jackson was finally decide upon as the locality for a settlement. (For further details see Collins, Barrington, Lang, an Bonwick.) We pass on to consider the rate at which population increased in the new settlement The original number, as indicated above, was 1,030. In 1790 the population, by frequen reinforcements, had increased to 3,739, and in 1800 to 4,958; in 1803 it had risen to 7,097 and in 1810 to 8,923, of whom fully one half were transported. In 1821 the total number o white people in the colony was 29,783, of whom some 14,000 were in bondage. It will b noticed that thus early in the history of the settlement the free population outnumbered th convicts, and with the increase of the people, from this date, the proportion of the latter elemen very rapidly declined. The following Table shows the numerical strength of the population o New South Wales at various stages of its subsequent history.

Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.
1828	36,598	1850	265,503	1865	411,388
1833	71,070	1851	197,168	1872	539,190
1836	77,096	1858	342,062	1879	721,311
1840	129,463	1859	336,572	1885	980,573

The population of this colony now exceeds a million.

It will be noticed that in the years 1851 and 1859 there are reductions in these figures These were not caused by any calamity or exodus of the population, but by divisions of th territory, Victoria having separated from the parent colony in 1850, and Queensland in 1859.

The rapid increase of the population indicated by the above figures has been attended b a corresponding expansion of industrial effort. The most important phase of this is, un doubtedly, the Pastoral. The green pastures of the colony have been the main sources of it wealth. The few horses, sheep, and cattle which arrived with the first expedition were th precursors of flocks and herds, whose numbers would have been thought incredible by the earl settlers. The stock which was landed in 1788 consisted of 1 stallion, 3 mares, 3 colts, 2 bulls 5 cows, 29 sheep, 19 goats, 49 hogs, 25 pigs, 5 rabbits, and 291 head of poultry. According to recent returns, the live stock of the Australasian colonies now comprises 1,272,020 horses 8,178,745 cattle, 74,345,954 sheep, and 939,031 pigs. Of these, the following proportion belongs to New South Wales: horses, 330,603; cattle, 1,336,329; sheep, 30,379,871; pigs 211,656.

New South Wales has long been distinguished for the quality and number of its sheep The production of fine wools was initiated at an early date in the history of the colony, b Captain John Macarthur, the pioneer of the shepherd kings of Australia. His enterprise an energy have rendered a service to the colonies which should keep his name in gratefu remembrance. Captain Macarthur arrived in Sydney with his regiment, the 102nd, in 1790 Acquiring in 1793 a grant of 200 acres of land, he devoted himself to sheep-farming on a very limited scale. His first experiments were made by crossing hair-bearing ewes with English bred sheep. In 1797 he obtained, from the Cape of Good Hope, three Merino rams and fiv Merino ewes. These were of a pure and valuable breed, coming from famous Escorial flocks, pre sented by the King of Spain to the Dutch Government. About 1803 Captain Macarthur visited England, and, by exhibiting samples of Merino wool from pure and cross-bred flocks, succeeded in interesting Lord Camden, at that time Colonial Secretary, in his scheme for rendering England independent, for its supplies of fine wools, of Spain and Buonaparte. Through the influence of Lord Camden, Captain Macarthur received a grant of 10,000 acres of land. In 1805 he returned to Sydney, and in his ship, appropriately christened the 'Argo,' brought out more sheep of selected breeds, including three rams and two ewes from the celebrated 'Negretti' flock of King George III. Governor King took considerable interest in Captain

Macarthur's wool-growing enterprises; but Governor Bligh, with characteristic wrong-headedness, violently opposed him, and their feuds operated to mutual disadvantage. However, the industry thus started survived all difficulties, and has since assumed gigantic proportions. When it is remembered, that before Captain Macarthur's exertions Australian flocks were valuable only for their meat and tallow, the wool being altogether worthless,—"the sheep of a coarse hairy type, derived from a cross between shipments from India and the Cape of Good Hope,"—we must admit with Dr. Lang, that "the obligations under which he has laid the colony to all time through his unremitted perseverance and unexampled success are great beyond calculation." Mr. Bonwick, the historian of the early days of Australia, claims for the Rev. Samuel Marsden the second place of honour in this important work. Sheep-farming thus initiated has expanded with the progress of the colony; the number of sheep in New South Wales being in 1801, 6,757; 1810, 34,450; 1821, 119,777; and 1830, 504,775; while in the census of 1881 the total is set down at 32,399,547. The quantity of wool produced in the colony during 1883 has been officially estimated at 182,873,449 lbs., valued at 9,470,595*l*. The quantity exported during the twelve months ending February 28th, 1886, was 303,590 bales, a return showing an increase of 59,104 bales on that of the corresponding period of the previous year. (See The Australian Wool Clip for 1885-6, by Mr. Griffin, U.S. Consul, Sydney, 1886-7.)

During the first years of settlement, notwithstanding the fertility of the soil and the pressing wants of the colonists, cultivation was much neglected. The historians of the earlier days of the colony tell us that "the first convict settlers were very poor farmers; the soil was neglected and the work badly performed; complaints were made of the intemperate habits of these primitive cultivators, and the consequent misery of their huts; the yield was small and the waste deplorable. Though the first farms were in small grants of land, they were of sufficient acreage to have supported a family had proper care and diligence been exercised; plots far less in extent, and of even worse soil, have raised many families to opulence elsewhere. Without doubt the improvement in colonial agriculture came with improved morals and the advent of free immigrants." The progress of agricultural settlement is fairly indicated in the following figures, showing the area under cultivation in various years:—

Year.	Acres.	Year.	Acres.	Year.	Acres.
1788	9	1825	45,514	1873	456,825
1792	1,516	1840	126,116	1876	513,840
1796	5,419	1850	196,056	1878	613,642
1799	8,750	1860	260,798	1881	706,498
1810	13,700	1865	378,254	1885	852,017

The acreage and produce of the principal crops for the year 1885 are thus recorded in the Victorian Year-Book:—

	Acres.	Bushels.		Acres.
Wheat	275,250	4,203,394	Other Cereals	1,270	18,932 bushs.
Oats	19,472	425,920	Potatoes	12,418	31,335 tons.
Barley	7,036	148,869	Hay	226,646	280,312 „
Maize	115,600	2,989,585	Vines	4,584	441,612 galls.

In addition to the acreage above reported, 492,212 acres are set down as devoted to other tillage, and 140,529 to green forage. The quantity of maize raised in New South Wales appears to be on the decrease, as we find it recorded that in 1879 the produce amounted to 4,420,580 bushels. Amongst other products of the soil which have been placed upon the markets may be included tobacco, sugar, and arrowroot. Oranges, lemons, citrons, loquats, &c. are exported in considerable quantities to the neighbouring colonies. The golden orange groves from Lane Cove to Parramatta are among the many lovely environs of Sydney.

The beginnings of Australasian commerce were insignificant. At first the Government was the sole importer and vendor of all the necessaries and luxuries. Next public officers commenced a kind of irregular traffic, and subsequently established a monopoly, the result of which proving more advantageous to themselves than to the colonists, memorials were presented against its continuance. The settlers complained that they were obliged to pay from 500 to 1,000 per cent. on English prices, and that, when ships arrived, only the officers, civil and military, were allowed on board, and these were thus "enabled to forestall the whole of the cargo, and retail it at the most exorbitant rates." We read of tea which cost 10*s*. per lb. being retailed at from 50*s*. to 150*s*.; hats costing 2*s*. at 20*s*.; a sieve costing 5*s*. 9*d*. at 63*s*.; and rum at 7*s*. 6*d*. resold at 8*l*. a gallon. Spirituous liquors were among the principal articles of trade, and frequently served as the medium of payment for services rendered. Trade was at first carried on principally by barter; subsequently paper money, mostly issued by private individuals, came into circulation. The limited metallic currency included Spanish dollars, Dutch guelders, and odd specimens of the coinage of all nations.

It was with a view to remedy this unsatisfactory condition of monetary affairs that efforts were first made for the establishment of a Bank, and these resulted in the issue of a charter under the seal of the colony, bearing date 1817, incorporating the first Bank of New South Wales. The nominal capital of this institution at its inception was 20,000*l.*, in 100*l* shares. The amount actually subscribed was 12,600*l.* It commenced by issuing notes of the value of 2*s.* 6*d.*, 5*s.*, 10*s.*, 1*l.* and upwards. The amount of discounts for the first three years was—1817, 12,193*l.*; 1818, 81,672*l.*; 1819, 107,256*l.* During the first five years it was able to pay the following very satisfactory dividends:—1818, 12 per cent.; 1819, 21 per cent.; 1820, 12 per cent.; 1821, 12 per cent; 1822, 15 per cent.; and these profitable results it has been enabled to maintain, and frequently to exceed, during its long and honourable career.

The Bank of Australia was the next institution of the kind, established in 1826. During its first year its strong room was broken into, and nearly 5000*l.* stolen. A portion of this amount was recovered, and the Bank made good progress, giving dividends of from 12 to 15 per cent. on the paid-up capital.

"The Commercial Banking Company of Sydney" entered the field in 1834 with a capital of 300,000*l.* in 100*l.* shares; and in the same year a Royal Charter was granted to an association formed in London, under the title of "The Bank of Australasia," for the purpose of establishing banks in New South Wales, Van Diemen's Land, and other settlements of Australasia. The capital was 200,000*l.* in 5,000 shares of 40*l.* each, to be paid up within two years: 4,500 shares were taken up in London, the remaining 500 being reserved for Australian investors. The position of the Banking Institutions of the colony on the 30th June, 1836, was as follows:

	Notes in Circulation.	Coin in Hand.	Assets.	Liabilities.
Bank of New South Wales	£32,222	£74,751	£292,468	£284,522
Bank of Australia	37,103	54,502	281,645	272,790
Commercial Banking Co. of Sydney . .	30,320	40,645	256,680	246,716
Bank of Australasia	29,994	71,159	523,928	307,722
	£129,639	£241,057	£1,354,721	£1,111,750

Space will not permit of a complete record of the growth of the various banking institutes, but for purposes of comparison the following statement of their number and position at the close of 1885 will suffice:—

Number of Banks.	Notes in Circulation.	Coin and Bullion.	Total Assets.	Total Liabilities.
14	£1,793,685	£4,230,616	£39,174,125	£32,517,643

The necessity for making provision against those "accidents by flood and field" to which life and property are liable soon forced itself upon the attention of the colonists. The Australian Marine Assurance Company was formed in 1831, with a nominal capital of 140,000*l.*, of which 10 per cent. was paid up (Martin's Australasia, p. 223). During its first year the risks insured amounted to 90,000*l.*, the premiums being 3,371*l.*, and the losses incurred 1,556*l.* The Union Fire and Marine Assurance Company was started in January 1836, capital 250,000*l.* in 5,000 shares. About this time several English companies appeared by their representatives, and did a considerable amount of business, the Guardian Assurance Company being the first to establish an agency. The first local Life Assurance Company was established in 1849 under the name of The Australian Mutual Provident Society. It is satisfactory proof of the possibilities of success which attend colonial enterprise, that although this institution has hitherto confined its operations within the bounds of Australasia, it is enabled to claim the proud position of being, "in point both of annual revenue and existing assurances, the most successful company in the British Empire." Its funds, according to the returns for 1885, amount to 5,470,627*l.* There are at the present time in Australasia thirteen Colonial Life Assurance Companies, and a Government Assurance Department in New Zealand. The accumulated funds of these institutions amount to nearly 9,000,000*l.* Owing to the reticence of many of the companies in reference to the details of their business, it is impossible to state definitely the amount insured in them, but the number of life policies in Australasian offices has been estimated by a competent authority (Mr. T. S. Robertson) at 150,000, assuring 42,000,000*l.* A large amount of business is also done by English offices having branches in the Colonies. The value of property insured in Sydney against fire risks in 1884 was nearly 42,000,000*l.*

The first newspaper in Australia was published on Saturday, March 5th, 1803, by George Howe. The issue is described as having been very badly printed on four pages of foolscap paper. It bore, at the top of the first page, its name—The Sydney Gazette and New South Wales Advertiser, with a very rude little wood-engraving representing a ship with a Union Jack, and an allegorical female figure seated on the shore. It was meant for a weekly, but became irregular, owing to scarcity of paper. The terms of subscription were "three shillings on the delivery of every fourth paper," but a "liberal deduction" was offered to every subscriber who provided his own paper! In several of the early issues the publisher makes bitter complaint of the difficulties he encountered, arising from "the very extravagant price of paper," and the reluctance of subscribers to "liquidate their accounts." Such was the humble commencement of the Australasian Newspaper Press, which now reckons over 700 journals.

The first manufactures established in the colony were those of flax-spinning and the weaving of linen cloth. These were commenced almost immediately after the arrival of the first fleet, and in 1804 there were nine looms at work, turning out 100 yards weekly, the produce of convict labour. The poor quality of the wool of the first flocks hindered any attempt at woollen manufacture; but in 1801, 306 yards of blankets were made in the prison factory. In 1836 the following manufactories were in operation. SYDNEY.—2 Distilleries, 7 Breweries, 1 Hat-maker, 2 Coarse Woollen, 2 Snuff and Cigar, 6 Soap and Candle, 2 Rope, 7 Tanneries 1 Pottery, 6 Iron and Brass founders, 14 Printing-presses, 2 Saw-mills, 1 Marble, 1 Patent-slip, for repairing vessels. PARRAMATTA.—1 Salt-factory. WINDSOR.—2 Breweries, 3 Tanneries. CAMPBELLTOWN.—2 Tanneries. BERRIMA.—2 Breweries, 2 Tanneries. BATHURST.—2 Coarse Woollen factories. MAITLAND.—1 Pottery. At the same date there were, in various parts of the colony—8 steam, 24 water, and 10 horse-power mills for grinding and dressing grain. In 1886 the workshops and factories numbered nearly 3,000, and gave employment to about 30,000 hands.

Ship-building was commenced about 1798, the first vessel built being the schooner 'Cumberland,' 26 tons. The year 1803 saw the completion of the cutter 'Integrity,' 59 tons; the schooner 'Resource,' 26 tons, and the 'Punt,' 12½ tons. In 1836 nine vessels, with a total tonnage of 301 tons, were built at Sydney.

The whale-fisheries were at this date sources of great profit, and whale-oil was considered to be, next to wool, a chief staple of the colony. In 1833 the products of the fishery were valued at 169,278*l*. In 1834, 40 whaling vessels, with a tonnage of 9,655 tons and 1,179 men sailed out of Sydney harbour.

To New South Wales belongs the honour of initiating the inter-colonial traffic of Australasia. As far back as 1823 we hear of a regular service being carried on between Sydney and Hobart. For a long period the shipping requirements of New Zealand and Queensland were mainly supplied by New South Wales, and at the present time a proportion of the mercantile navy of the Australian colonies is said to be the property of Sydney merchants.

The import and export trade of New South Wales has more than kept pace with the increase of population. The following table shows the proportion per head, taken at various intervals during the past fifty-five years :—

Year.	£	s.	d.	Year.	£	s.	d.	Year.	£	s.	d.
1831	15	18	4	1851	17	0	10	1874	41	6	1
1841	25	4	2	1861	33	9	1	1884	45	17	9

In 1831 the total value of the imports of New South Wales was 490,152*l*., and of the exports 324,168*l*. In 1836 the imports were 1,237,406*l*., and the exports 748,624*l*. Great as this increase is, it gives no promise of the vast expansion, within the limits of fifty years, indicated by the following figures, which represent the annual values at more recent dates :—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1850	£2,078,338	£2,399,580
1860	7,519,285	5,072,020
1870	7,757,281	7,990,038
1880	13,950,075	15,525,138
1882	21,281,130	16,716,961
1884	22,826,985	18,251,506

For this rapid increase of its commerce New South Wales is largely indebted to the wealth and variety of its mineral resources. Gold, silver, copper, lead, tin, antimony, iron, coal, and kerosene shale exist in large quantities in various parts of the territory. Although the younger colony of Victoria claims the premier position as a producer of gold, New South Wales has considerably increased the world's stock of the precious metal, the yield of the mines from 1851 to 1884 being valued at over 35,000,000*l*. In 1885 coin and bullion to the amount of 1,228,180*l*. were exported. During the same year, 422,160 ounces of gold were received at the Sydney Mint; but of this quantity upwards of 3,000 ounces is noted as the produce of Queensland (Report of the Sydney Mint, Dec. 31, 1885). Extensive deposits of silver have recently been profitably worked at Silverton in the south-west. It is, however, among the carboniferous rocks of the colony that the most reliable sources of mineral wealth are found. The coal districts of New South Wales comprise an area of 23,950 square miles. Mr. Wm. Keene, F.G.S., the Government Examiner of Coalfields, in 1866 reported that eleven distinct seams, extending from Newcastle to Wollongong, disturbed only by comparatively modern eruptions of porphyries and basalts, were being worked. More recent statements refer to the existence of at least sixteen distinct seams, of three feet and upwards, in the upper coal measures in the neighbourhood of Newcastle, and eleven in those of the western district. Mr. Keene also mentions the existence of a seam more than 30 feet in thickness on the lands of the Australian Agricultural Company a few miles from Stroud, and Mr. G. H. Reid, in an Essay on New South Wales, refers to the discovery near Jervis Bay of two seams measuring respectively 24 and 39 feet. Coal was one of the first exports of New South Wales. In 1799 a cargo was shipped from Newcastle to Bengal, and in 1801 a small shipment sent to Cape Colony realized 6*l.* a ton. In 1820 the yield was 20 tons a day. In 1836 the Australian Agricultural Company raised 12,646 tons, which at an average price of 9*s.* a ton realized 5,747*l.* The growth of the coal trade of the colony is indicated by the following statement of the value in various years :—

Year.	Tons.	Value.	Year.	Tons.	Value.
1829	780	£394	1859	308,213	£204,371
1839	21,283	10,441	1869	919,774	346,146
1849	48,516	14,647	1879	1,253,475	765,133

Kerosene shale is distributed over an area of 660 square miles, and the deposits are being worked with profit. The mineral products of New South Wales for the year 1884, as given by Mr. E. Greville in his excellent Year-Book of Australia, are as follows :—

Gold	107,199	oz.	value	£395,292	Coal	2,749,109	tons,	value £1,303,077
Silver	93,660	,,	,,	19,780	Shale	31,618	,,	,, 72,176
Copper and Regulus,	7,305	tons,	,,	416,179	Iron	3,759	,,	,, 24,752
Tin, and Tin Ore	6,666	,,	,,	521,587	Silver lead ore	9,167	,,	,, 214,940
Antimony	433	,,	,,	6,458	Bismuth	14	,,	,, 2,770

The total value of minerals raised in New South Wales alone was 2,977,011*l.* in the year 1884. At the commencement of 1885 over 1,665 miles of rail, constructed at a cost of 20,080,138*l.*, were open for traffic, and an additional 391 miles were in course of construction. The railway receipts for 1885 were 2,492,775*l.* Telegraphic communication is maintained over 10,141 miles of line and 20,000 miles of wire. About 2,500,000 telegrams are despatched annually. The total revenue of the Colony for 1885 amounted to 7,588,667*l.*, an increase of 471,076*l.* on that of the previous year. The public debt is 35,632,459*l.* Against this liability must be placed a large amount of assets in the shape of permanent and reproductive works, and a magnificent territorial estate of inexhaustible mineral and agricultural wealth.

VICTORIA.

Early in 1802 Lieutenant Murray, while surveying the south coast of Australia, discovered the splendid harbour of Port Phillip. In April of the same year Captain Flinders entered these waters, and, unaware of Murray's visit, he naturally imagined himself the discoverer. As the result of the reports furnished to Governor King by Murray and Flinders, a survey party, headed by Mr. Charles Grimes, Surveyor-General of New South Wales, was sent round from Sydney in 1803, and by them the Yarra and Saltwater rivers were discovered.

An effort to establish a colony was made by Colonel Collins at Port Phillip Heads, in October, 1803, with a party of convicts from England. The site chosen proved unsuitable; no very strenuous efforts appear to have been made to secure a better position, and three months after their arrival, the party left for Tasmania on the 27th January, 1804. Twenty years elapsed before the district was again visited, but on the 16th December, 1824, Hume and Hovell, the explorers, having made their way overland from Sydney, camped beside Corio Bay. The reports furnished by these explorers to the Governor of New South Wales, General Darling, led to a second attempt at settlement, Captains Wetherall and Wright being sent from Sydney with a party of military and convicts for that purpose. Landing at Western Port, they found the site unsuitable, and returned to Sydney in 1826. In 1830 Captain Sturt explored the courses of the rivers Murray and Murrumbidgee. Three years later Mr. Edward Henty, in his search for a suitable place for a settlement, entered Portland Bay, and at once determined to select its shores as the scene of his operations. On the 19th November, 1834, Mr. Henty returned from Tasmania, and a month later was joined by his brother Francis. The brothers also brought over a sufficient number of labourers and servants, and a large stock of necessary supplies. Being thus enabled to combine agricultural and whaling pursuits, their enterprise proved very successful; and when, some two years later, Major Mitchell, on his exploring expedition of 1836, reached the shores of Portland Bay, he was surprised to find a well-established settlement on what he had imagined to be an unexplored coast. Mr. E. Henty made the plough which first entered the fertile Victorian soil. Forty-five years afterwards this same plough, old and weather-beaten, battered and rusty, formed an interesting exhibit amongst the thousands of mechanical, scientific, and artistic objects in the Melbourne International Exhibition of 1880.

In May, 1835, John Batman arrived in Port Phillip from Tasmania. He made a treaty with the natives, by which, on behalf of a company for which he was the agent, and in exchange for certain blankets, knives, and tomahawks, he obtained a tract of 600,000 acres of land, extending from Queenscliff to Kilmore, and including the sites of Melbourne and Geelong. This bargain was annulled by Governor Bourke, and his decision was upheld by the English Government. Two days after the completion of his trade with the black chiefs, while Batman regarded himself as part proprietor of this vast area of country, he first visited the spot where now stands the marvellous city of Melbourne. The following entry appears in his journal:—

"Monday, June 8, 1835.—The wind foul this morning for Indented Head. We tried but could not get out of the river. The boat went up the large river I have spoken of, which comes from the east, and, I am glad to state, about six miles up found the river all good water and very deep. This will be the place for a village" (Bonwick's Port Phillip, p. 189).

Two months after Batman returned to Launceston, while another party sailed up the Yarra, and landed on the 28th August, 1835, near where is now the Falls Bridge. This party had been sent over by John Pascoe Fawkner, a Launceston tradesman, who shortly after followed in person, arriving on the 18th October, 1835. To Batman has been very generally conceded the honour of being the actual founder of Melbourne.

A permanent settlement once established, population soon began to pour in. The glowing reports which Major Mitchell published concerning the richness of the soil, the beauty of the scenery, and the pleasant climate of Australia Felix, aroused a wide-spread interest in the new country; and flocks and herds made their way over land from Sydney, and over sea from Tasmania.

The rapid growth of the settlement soon rendered it imperative that some representative of the law should be sent over from the seat of Government. Captain Lonsdale was appointed Resident Magistrate, arriving in H.M.S. 'Rattlesnake,' September, 1836. A week later the brig 'Stirlingshire' brought over the first Government Staff, consisting of Mr. Webb, Sub-Collector of Customs; Messrs. Russell, Darke, and D'Arcy, surveyors; Mr. Howson and two other constables, together with Lieut. King and thirty soldiers. Some convicts were also brought over, in order that their labour might be utilized in the construction of necessary public works. After inspecting the surrounding country Capt. Lonsdale formally approved of the site chosen by Batman for the formation of a town, and his approval was confirmed by Governor Bourke, who visited the settlement in March 1837, and by whom the city was named Melbourne, after the English Prime Minister of the day. Another township, on the shores of Hobson's Bay, was on the same day, April 10th, 1837, proclaimed with the designation of Williamstown, in honour of the reigning monarch, King William IV. The bay had for its sponsor Captain Hobson of the 'Rattlesnake.'

The first land sale was held on the 1st June, 1837, when 100 half-acre lots were disposed of, realizing 3,517*l.*, or an average price of 35*l.* 3*s.* 4¾*d.* each; 7 lots at Williamstown were at the same time sold for 325*l.*, or an average price of 46*l.* 8*s.* 6¾*d.* The first two lots sold in the town of Melbourne were purchased by Mr. Fawkner at the price of 32*l.* and 25*l.* respectively; the acre of land which he thus became possessed of for the sum of 57*l.* being situated at the corner of King and Flinders Streets. For a lot at the corner of William Street, on a portion of which the Yarra Hotel now stands, Mr. Batman paid 75*l.* The lot at the north-east corner of Elizabeth and Collins Streets realized 32*l.*; and sections on what is now known as 'the block,' with frontages of 66 feet to Great and Little Collins Streets, were sold for 18*l.* and 20*l.* each. That all the buyers were not sanguine as to the future value of their purchases is evident from the fact, that in one or two instances they forfeited their deposits rather than complete their contracts. Mr. Bonwick mentions that Mr. John Hodgson "relinquished his deposit of 2*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.* upon the half-acre in Collins Street, next the Elizabeth Street corner, rather than pay the balance of 19*l.* 18*s.* 0*d.* upon this hopeless speculation." The present value of this allotment, with its two frontages of 66 feet to Collins Street and Flinders Lane, and a depth between of about 314 feet, is considerably over 100,000*l.* On the 11th December, 1885, 33 feet frontage to Collins Street, with a depth of 140 feet, realized at auction 1,140*l.* per foot, or at the rate of 354,080*l.* per acre. (Since then land in Collins Street has been sold at over 1,200*l.* per foot frontage by 180 feet in depth. Editor.)

From the earliest settlement Melbourne has been a place of commerce. By Batman and Fawkner, the two founders of the city, trade was evidently regarded as of equal importance with pasture or agriculture. Both of these pioneers entered immediately into business as importers and retailers, and their schooners, the 'Gem' and the 'Enterprize,' were kept busily engaged in bringing over cargoes of necessary supplies from Tasmania. Batman is described as being "the merchant of the day;" his store is said to have been extensive and profitable, and his business to have included amongst its branches those of squatter, merchant, shipping-agent, bill-discounter, money-lender, and broker, while Fawkner seems to have blended the occupations of agriculturist, trader, publisher and publican.

The first monetary institution established in Melbourne was a branch of the Derwent (Tasmania) Bank, at the south-east corner of Queen and Collins Streets, in 1837. Towards the close of the same year a branch of the Bank of Australasia was opened by Mr. D. C. Macarthur in Little Collins Street, and another of the Union Bank by Mr. Highett in Queen Street; subsequently the Derwent and Union Banks were amalgamated. The first Bank having a local proprietary was established by Mr. John Gardiner in 1838, and was known as the Port Phillip Bank. The Melbourne Fire and Marine Assurance Company was established in 1839 with a nominal capital of 50,000*l.* (Australia Felix, p. 86).

In addition to the stores of the first merchants, the following places of business had been established by October, 1839:—4 Tailors, 4 Blacksmiths, 4 Butchers, 3 Bakers, 3 Saddlers, and 12 Shoemakers. In those days there were no lawyers in the land, and Mr. McNall, the butcher, did the legal business of the community. By him was drawn up the will of John Batman, who died in May, 1840. Whether the misfortunes which subsequently befell the Batman family, in consequence of the declared informality of this document, were owing to the absence of the legal fraternity at the time it was prepared, or to their presence at the period when it was desired to bring its provisions into operation, has not been explained. The Melbourne Club was established in 1838, and the Mechanics' Institute and School of Arts in 1839.

In the same month (October, 1839) in which the above list of the business places of Melbourne was drawn up, an important addition was Messrs. Arden and Strode's printing office, from which issued the Port Phillip Gazette, the first legally published newspaper of the settlement. Although Messrs. Arden and Strode were the first to publish a newspaper for which the necessary legal requirements had been complied with, they can hardly claim to be regarded as the fathers of the Victorian Press; for Mr. Fawkner, in January, 1838, published a MS. newspaper of four pages, called the Melbourne Advertiser. This publication was continued for nine weeks, at the end of which Mr. Fawkner sent it forth in print, having imported a small press and some type from Tasmania. As the proprietor, however, had not complied with the requirements of the law by providing sureties, the publication of the paper had to be suspended; but it shortly afterwards reappeared, under the title of the Port Phillip Patriot. In 1842 no less than four newspapers were published in Melbourne, the Port Phillip Herald, established in 1840 by Mr. George Cavenagh, and the Melbourne Times in 1842, by a company. The first provincial paper published in the colony was the Geelong Advertiser, November, 1840; Fawkner being the proprietor, J. Harrison the editor, and Mr. Scamble printer and publisher.

Although we are apt, in view of the immense strides which the Colony has made since the discovery of the gold-fields, to regard somewhat contemptuously its earlier progress, still the settlers made great advances. Then came over-speculation in land, causing great distress, and in 1842 a crisis of great severity resulted; but, despite these hindrances, and the occasional seasons of depression, the progress of the Colony was continuous, and the wealth from commerce and agriculture rapidly accumulated. The area of settlement grew in extent year by year, and the population, which by the close of 1849 had increased to 76,000, had reason to congratulate themselves that their lines had fallen in pleasant places, as compared with those of the millions who battled for existence in the overcrowded labour-fields of the Old World.

The early settlers were not without an appreciative feeling of their own importance as a community, and as far back as 1840 we find indications of a strong desire for those privileges of self-government which in these later days are so largely enjoyed and so highly valued by Australasian colonists. An agitation soon commenced for separation from the parent colony of New South Wales. To this struggle for home rule there could be but one result; but the victory, though inevitable, was long delayed. It was not till the 1st July, 1850, that the district of Port Phillip was elevated to the dignity of a distinct colony. On the same day was conferred upon it the auspicious name it bears, that of Victoria, our beloved Queen. This important event forms a fitting close to the first chapter of the history of the Colony. The opening of the second chapter was destined to be marked by an event of almost equal importance, for in no other light can we regard the discovery of the gold-fields, which, as the diggers express it, "broke out" about the middle of the following year.

By the revelation of vast stores of wealth embedded in the auriferous lands of the Colony, an entirely new era of activity was inaugurated. At first the gold-fields drew many away from their accustomed spheres of labour, and the ordinary industries of the community were for the moment paralyzed; but the check was of the most transient kind. A tremendous flood of immigration from Europe and America set in toward these golden shores, and the vast accessions of population rendered the occupations of those engaged in agriculture and mercantile pursuits lucrative to an extent far beyond their previous hopes. The extraordinary commercial prosperity of the years 1851-2 was in some measure checked by the reckless speculation of traders, and the glutting of the markets by shippers. The Colony, at a single bound, assumed a position of importance and wealth which, under ordinary conditions, could only have been reached after many years of labour.

The numerical strength of the population, according to Hayter, at various dates has been as follows :—

Date.	Persons.	Date.	Persons.
May 25, 1836	177	April 7, 1861	540,322
March 2, 1841	11,738	Dec. 31, 1874	731,528
,, 2, 1851	77,345	,, 31, 1879	840,620
April 26, 1854	236,798	Mar. 31, 1886	1,001,756

The increase of Victorian commerce can be most accurately gauged by the Customs statistics of Imports and Exports. The earliest of these returns bears the date of 1837, and was compiled by Mr. Webb, who, as already mentioned, arrived in Melbourne in 1836, and under Captain Lonsdale, inaugurated the Fiscal System of Port Phillip. From the reports issued by this gentleman and his successors we extract the following :—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1837	£115,379	£12,178	1865	£13,257,537	£13,150,748
1844	151,062	256,847	1870	12,455,758	12,470,014
1850	744,925	1,041,796	1875	16,685,874	14,766,974
1855	12,007,939	13,493,338	1880	14,556,894	15,954,559
1860	15,093,730	12,962,704	1885	18,022,852	15,557,090

It will help us to realize the progress of the industrial arts in this Colony during its first half-century, if we consider the displays made by the manufacturers of Victoria at various exhibitions. The earliest of these were little better than bazaars, at which importers and traders displayed samples of goods made in England or Europe. The colonial exhibits consisted mostly of natural products or native curiosities—colonial art being represented by extraordinary carvings done with a penknife by lonely shepherds on distant out-stations, the inventions being chiefly novel appliances for drafting sheep or drawing water; while small collections of ordinary products of the workshop and the forge faintly shadowed forth the future achievements of Victorian manufacturers.

In 1854, the date at which the first Melbourne Exhibition of any importance was held, the number of factories in the Colony, exclusive of flour-mills and fellmongeries, was 96. The following list, compiled at the time, will give a fair idea of the principal industries at that period :—

27 Aërated Water and Cordial Factories.
16 Breweries.
4 Wine-presses.
2 Steam Sausage Machines.
1 Chaff Mill.
17 Coach-builders.
5 Iron Foundries.
1 Rope Works.
1 Pottery.
1 Steam Washing Machine.
12 Candle Works.
7 Soap Works.
1 Boiling-down Works.
1 Bone Mill.

In 1861 another Exhibition was held, preparatory to the London International Exhibition of the following year. On this occasion 703 exhibitors displayed their wares, and a much larger proportion than at the previous show were of colonial manufacture. At this date the total number of factories had increased to 429, and employed 4,000 hands. In 1866 Sir Henry Manners-Sutton opened the first Melbourne Intercolonial Exhibition, at which 2,956 exhibitors competed, including 1479 Victorians. The displays of colonial manufacturers on this occasion showed a great improvement in style, quality, and variety. Many were declared, by competent judges, to equal those of the best English and European makers. This standard of excellence was fully maintained at the Exhibitions of 1872 and 1875, but it was reserved for the years 1880-1 to witness the full strength and triumph of these industries. At the Melbourne International Exhibition, 1880-1, no fewer than 2,130 Victorian exhibitors competed, the number of their exhibits being 5,235, and occupying 187,758 feet of space. The unqualified testimony which was rendered by foreign visitors to the excellence of the workmanship in many branches of manufacture is as valuable evidence as the 588 first and 1,256 minor awards, which Victorian exhibitors secured, of the immense advance made during 30 years. Few statistical facts in the history of Victoria show more conclusively its progress than this, that in 1851 its manufactories only numbered 56, while in 1886 there were fully 3,000, employing 50,000 hands.

It is noteworthy that the year which witnessed the triumph of Victorian manufacturers was also that in which the Export of Wool attained the highest value; the wool exports for the year 1880 being 112,486,058 lbs., realizing 6,417,453*l*. This amount has since been exceeded, the export in 1884 being 119,542,407 lbs., but owing to the fall in prices this larger quantity only realized 6,342,887*l*. Considerable purchases are made in the Melbourne markets for home manufacture. Sheep were first introduced into Victoria by Mr. Edward Henty, who landed them, with other stock, at Portland Bay in 1834, and by Mr. John Batman, who brought over 500 sheep in the 'Norval' in October, 1835. In the same year Mr. John Gardiner came from Sydney, overland, bringing a quantity of live stock, and further supplies arrived speedily by land and sea. The progress of the pastoral interest is indicated by the following table, showing the number of the principal descriptions of live stock at various dates :—

Year.	Horses.	Cattle.	Sheep.	Pigs.
1836	75	155	41,332
1850	21,219	378,806	6,032,783	3,986
1870	167,220	721,096	10,761,887	130,946
1885	293,846	1,287,945	10,637,412	234,347

In the earlier days of our colonial history, great difficulties were experienced by those who desired to establish themselves as cultivators of the soil. The cry of "unlock the lands" was almost the first that made itself heard in the Victorian Parliament. As a result, a liberal code of land-laws was passed, and the disproportion at one time shown in the returns of population and tillage no longer exists. In 1853, when the inhabitants numbered 222,436, only 34,816 acres were under tillage. In 1867 the population and area under cultivation were respectively 651,571 persons and 631,719 acres, while the returns for 1885 present the more satisfactory result of 2,323,493 acres to a population of 967,187. The following is a summary of a detailed valuation by Mr. Hayter (Year-Book) :—Cereals, 2,768,968*l.* ; root-crops, 840,591*l.* ; hay and forage, 2,205,017*l.* ; tobacco and hops, 99,392*l.* ; grapes, wine and brandy, 173,719*l.* ; other produce, 477,840*l.* Total, 6,565,527*l.*

It is, however, in a large degree to her vast mineral wealth Victoria owes her prosperity. The first discovery of gold is enshrouded in some mystery. Traces of the precious metal were found in 1840 by Count Strzelecki, while exploring Gippsland. More encouraging discoveries were made by the Hon. W. Campbell at Clunes in 1850, and by Mr. L. J. Michel and others at Anderson's Creek in 1851. Mr. Hiscocks, in August of the same year, found gold at Buninyong, and the discovery which he made public with commendable promptitude led to the opening up of the rich gold-field of Ballarat. Mr. Esmonds, an old Californian miner, found gold in the quartz reefs of the Pyrenees, and about the same date the researches of Mr. C. T. Peters led to the development of the Mount Alexander Mines. The effect of these discoveries upon the colony has already been referred to. Some idea may be formed of their value and extent from the reports issued by the Department of Mines, which give the total yield of the Victorian gold-fields, to the close of 1885, as amounting to 53,727,986 ounces. This, at 4*l.* per oz., represents 214,911,944*l.* The value of other minerals raised in the Colony between 1851 and 1884 is officially estimated at 828,948*l.*, the largest items being tin, 362,974*l.* ; copper, 105,559*l.* ; and antimony, 169,295*l.* Silver contributes 66,251*l.* ; iron, 17,399*l.* ; and lead, 4,922*l.* Precious stones, including diamonds, sapphires, &c., have occasionally been found, but not in sufficient quantities to make the discovery of any commercial importance. Hopes have often been excited that a payable coal-field might be discovered in the Colony. Up to the present this desideratum has not been attained, though promising indications have been found in South Gippsland. As illustrating the value of such a discovery, it may be mentioned that in 1864 the value of the coal imported was 174,579*l.* ; in 1875, 263,267*l.* ; and in 1884, 412,697*l.* Nearly all this came from New South Wales.

The establishment, in 1837, of the first Banking Institutions of Victoria has already been referred to. The following figures, giving their position at the close of the last six quinquennials, show their progress :—

Year.	Banks.	Paid-up Capital.	Assets.	Liabilities.
1860	9	£6,134,657	£12,693,727	£9,238,731
1865	9	8,007,500	14,755,518	9,948,064
1870	10	8,305,224	16,866,405	12,357,571
1875	12	8,572,120	22,279,482	15,483,172
1880	11	9,126,250	23,284,822	19,488,512
1885	11	8,901,250	39,174,125	32,517,643

The deposits in the hands of the banks amount to nearly 30,600,000*l.* ; to which must be added a sum of over 3,000,000*l.* in the Savings Banks, and about 2,000,000*l.* intrusted to Building Societies. The total accumulation thus presented is more than double that of ten years ago, the amount similarly deposited on the 31st Dec., 1876, being 16,968,981*l.*

A satisfactory evidence of the prosperity of the community may be found in the great increase which, during the past few years, has taken place in the value of real estate. What some call "unearned in crement" has not been confined to the capital city. In other towns, and in some of the newly-settled districts, it has been of a surprising character. An instance which has come under the personal notice of the writer may be cited here. A few acres of land situated at Warragul, Gippsland, purchased in 1879 from the Government for less than 300*l.*, has recently been sold at auction for over 10,000*l.*

The position attained by the Colony of Victoria, which is but a small slice of the Australian continent, is remarkable. The 224 persons who, in 1836, composed the entire white population of the Port Phillip district, have now reached over a million, the produce of whose industry is estimated at an annual value of 25,000,000*l.* The public revenue, which in 1841 was 144,938*l.*, has increased to 6,247,466*l.* Over 35,000,000*l.* are required to represent the external trade, the annual imports and exports. About 1,700 miles of railway, constructed at a cost of 22,000,000*l.*, are open for traffic, and constant additions are being made. A system of Public Instruction has been carried on for thirteen years at an aggregate cost of 7,500,000*l.* During the 35 years of its existence as a separate colony, the Government of Victoria has invested about 50,000,000*l.* in public works, of which a large proportion, including railways and waterworks, are reproductive.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

South Australia was discovered by Captain Flinders in 1802, and from him many of the principal points along the coast, including Fowler's Bay, Spencer's and St. Vincent's Gulfs, Port Lincoln, and Yorke Peninsula, received the names they still bear. No effort at colonization followed immediately on the discovery, and the land remained untenanted for nearly thirty years except by the aborigines, and a small but lawless settlement of sailors, deserters from whaling ships, on Kangaroo Island. In 1830 Captain Sturt made his way overland from Sydney, and other explorers soon followed in his track. From the favourable accounts of the country which they published, and which were transmitted to England, the movement arose which eventuated in the establishment of the Colony. A charter was granted by the Imperial Parliament to an association having this object in view, and on the 12th December, 1836, the first expedition arrived at Holdfast Bay, now better known as Glenelg. There, under an ancient gum tree, Captain Hindmarsh proclaimed the Colony. The operations of the South Australian Association were not successful, and something like general insolvency appears to have been imminent, when, in 1841, the Commissioners resigned their charter, receiving from the Imperial Government the sum of 200,000*l.* as compensation, to be repaid by local taxation. South Australia thus became a Crown Colony, but in 1856 responsible government was established.

Under its original charter South Australia only comprised the country lying between 26° S. and the Southern Ocean, the eastern limit being the Victorian border, and the western long. 32° E. In 1861 the latter boundary was extended to Western Australia, 80,070 square miles being thus added to the territory. In 1863 Mr. Stuart, the S. A. Government explorer, having penetrated the terra incognita that extended to the north coast of the continent, the Colony obtained a still larger addition to its area in what is now known as the Northern Territory. South Australia now contains a magnificent domain of 903,425 square miles.

It was long the policy of the Colony to attract immigrants. The extent to which these efforts, coupled with the natural increase of the population, have been successful is indicated by the following table from the Statistical Register :—

Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.
1836	540	1850	63,700	1875	210,442
1840	14,600	1860	124,112	1883	320,450

The warm dry climate of South Australia has proved very suitable for wheat-growing, which has always been one of the principal industries of the Colony. Among the few exhibits which Australasia was able to present at the great world show of 1851 was some South Australian wheat, which attracted much attention, and for its excellence was awarded a medal. In 1856 bread stuff and grain to the value of 556,371*l.* were exported. In 1865 the export was 1,228,480*l.* (Statistical Sketch by J. Boothby, Government Statist). The total value of the export of wheat from South Australia from 1856 to 1865 was 7,677,295*l.*—the annual average for the first five years (1856-60) being 578,195*l.*, and for the second (1861-5), 957,244*l.* In 1844 the land under wheat was 18,980 acres ; in 1861 it had increased to 310,636 acres. The produce at the latter date is set down at 3,410,756 bushels. From the returns of later years are selected the following :—

Year.	Acres.	Bushels.
1865	390,836	4,252,949
1875	1,305,851	9,332,049
1885	1,942,453	14,621,755

The smallest crop during the last twelve years was gathered in 1876, when only 5,857,569 bushels were obtained from 1,083,732 acres, a contrast to the yield of the previous year, when 10,739,834 bushels were reaped from 898,820 acres. A larger total, representing a smaller average yield per acre, was presented in 1883, when 14,649,230 bushels were taken off 1,846,151 acres. The value of the cereals exported in 1884 was 2,358,496*l.*, and in 1885, 2,182,292*l.* Although wheat occupies the first position, most of the other grains common to the colonies are largely produced. A considerable acreage is devoted to the cultivation of the vine, but this industry does not seem in this Colony to be increasing in favour. In 1873 there were 5,217 acres of vineyards, producing 733,478 gallons of wine; but in 1884 the acreage had been reduced to 4,590 acres, and the vintage to 473,535 gallons. The production of the olive has been introduced with fair prospects of success. Large quantities of fruit both for home consumption and for export are grown in the South Australian orchards, and the manufacture of jams and preserves affords, during the season, a large amount of employment. The preparation of dried raisins and currants has been tried with success. Hops, flax, tobacco, chicory, opium, and castoria are grown with fair results. The total land under cultivation in 1885 was 2,785,490 acres. Twenty years before it was only 587,775 acres.

Though cultivation takes the first rank, the pastoral interests of the Colony are very considerable. Seasons of drought and excessive heat have caused much trouble to the stock owners of South Australia, but these have only retarded, not stopped, pastoral enterprise; while the discoveries, at a comparatively recent date, of extensive northern plains of rich pasturage in lands which had been deemed a desert, have given it a great impetus.

The first supplies of live stock came from the Cape of Good Hope, Tasmania, and New South Wales. Large numbers of sheep and cattle were introduced in 1838, and the high prices realized amply compensated the overlanders for the hardships of their long and toilsome journey.

The following statement from the Statistical Register of the live stock in South Australia at various dates are sufficiently striking:—

Year.	Horses.	Cattle.	Sheep.
1838	480	2,500	28,000
1850	6,488	60,034	984,199
1875	107,164	219,240	6,179,395
1885	168,420	389,726	6,696,406

The export of wool has kept pace with the increase of the flocks, as the following figures show:—

Year.	Value of Wool Exported.	Year.	Value of Wool Exported.
1838	£770	1868	£1,305,280
1845	72,235	1872	1,647,387
1860	573,368	1885	1,671,775

South Australia is rich in minerals, and although up to the end of 1884 only 150,000 ounces of gold had been produced, in that year the mineral exports were valued at 463,748*l.*, and in 1885 at 326,428*l.* The copper mines were long a source of wealth; from them ore to the value of nearly 20,000,000*l.* has been extracted; but, owing to the fall in prices from 120*l.* to 44*l.* per ton, and the difficulties of transit, many of the copper mines have been for some years neglected. It is thought, that with the extension of the railway system, and a possible advance in the value of the metal, this industry may assume its former position in the Colony. The Corporation of Copper Mines is stated to be taking active steps for the encouragement of mining by the establishment of smelting works. Silver has been discovered in various localities. Some ore recently found in the neighbourhood of Burra yielded from 50 to 90 ounces of metal to the ton. Lead mines have been worked since 1841, and amongst the other mineral products may be mentioned slate, asbestos, kaolin, gypsum, salt, and sulphur. Precious stones, including diamonds, have also been found.

The exportation of large quantities of produce, and the constant demand for articles of foreign manufacture have naturally attracted a considerable amount of shipping to the port. South Australia has direct steam communication with Melbourne, Sydney, Hobart, Perth, and London. The mercantile marine on the Port Adelaide Register in 1886 was as follows:—

	Vessels.	Tons.
Steamers	92	12,542
Sailing vessels	135	16,069
Barges, hulks, &c.	80	7,561
Total	307	36,172

An old record gives the tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at Port Adelaide in 1843 at 7,532 tons, and in 1849 at 80,623 tons. Recent official returns give the number and tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at the various ports of South Australia in the undermentioned years as follow:—Year 1876, vessels, 1,771, tons, 732,330; 1880, vessels, 2,156, tons, 1,200,904; 1884, vessels, 2,231, tons, 1,834,532. The expansion of external trade is indicated by the following figures:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1838	£158,682	£6,442	1865	£2,927,596	£3,129,846
1845	184,819	148,459	1876	4,576,183	4,816,170
1852	798,811	1,787,741	1885	5,289,014	5,417,145

The position of the South Australian banks, as shown in the averages for the quarter ending June 30th, 1885, indicated that the eleven institutions doing business in the Colony had notes in circulation to the value of 563,110*l.*, and held deposits amounting to 5,227,960*l.*, their total liabilities being 6,063,590*l.*, against which were assets, including 1,273,720*l.* in coin, and bullion valued at 12,148,550*l.* On the same date, the depositors in the local savings banks were 49,237, their total deposits amounting to 1,433,510*l.*, giving an average to each depositor of 29*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* During the latter part of the year a satisfactory increase took place; the number of depositors on the 31st December, 1885, being 54,474, about one-sixth of the entire population, and the amount to their credit 1,598,901*l.*, and this in a period of depression. On the 31st December, 1885, 1,063 miles of railway were open for traffic, and a large additional mileage was in course of construction. The revenue from passenger traffic amounted to 270,911*l.*, an increase of 20,000*l.* on the returns of 1884. The carriage of goods and live stock produced 415,446*l.*, an increase of 80,000*l.* on the earnings of the previous year. The extent of telegraph lines open at the end of 1884 was 5,230 miles. About 500,000 local and 166,000 intercolonial messages were despatched during the year. Between England and South Australia 7,268 cablegrams were despatched, while 48,524 messages passed over the lines on their way between the other colonies and the mother country.

The total public revenue of the Colony for the financial year ending June 30, 1885, was 2,157,904*l.*, an increase on that of 1883-4 of 146,420*l.* The revenue for the year ending June 30, 1886, has been officially estimated at 2,631,024*l.*

QUEENSLAND.

In 1605 the Spaniard Luis Vaes de Torres passed through the strait to which, after his discoveries had lain in oblivion for a century and a half, his name was given. In 1606 some Dutch sailors visited the Gulf of Carpentaria, and a ship of the same nation sailed for 150 miles along the northern coast in 1623. Captain Cook examined the eastern shore of Australia in 1770, and from him Moreton Bay received its name. Port Curtis was discovered in 1802 by Captain Flinders, who was shiprecked on Barrier Reef. The first to penetrate the interior was Mr. Oxley, Surveyor-General of New South Wales, whose explorations commenced in 1818, and continued until 1823. He discovered the Lachlan, Macquarrie, and Brisbane rivers, and was followed by Cunningham, Mitchell, Leichardt, and others, who did much to open up the eastern portion of the Colony. The western part was still unknown when Burke and Wills passed through it on their journey to the Gulf of Carpentaria in 1860. Important discoveries have since been made by Landsborough, Walker, Hann, and countless others.

The first settlement was effected in 1823. A party of convicts was sent to Moreton Bay by Sir Thomas Brisbane, Governor of New South Wales. The site originally selected at Redcliff Point proved unsuitable, and the party removed to the Brisbane river, now occupied by the flourishing city of that name. Pastoral settlement commenced in 1841, and population followed in its wake. In 1842 the convicts were recalled to Sydney, and Moreton Bay was proclaimed a free district open to immigrants. In 1846 an expedition arrived from England, having for its object the foundation of a settlement at Port Curtis. This enterprise was unsuccessful. About 1849 a large influx of population set in, and shortly afterwards the inhabitants began to agitate for self-government. It was some years before they succeeded, but in December, 1859, Sir George Bowen arrived at Brisbane, proclaimed Queensland a separate colony, and assumed the reins of government over an area of 668,224 square miles, more than double that of New South Wales, and seven times that of Victoria. The following figures, compiled from official sources, show the increase of population:—1846, 2,257; 1856, 17,082; 1866, 94,710; 1886, 316,968.

The pastoral industry flourishes in Queensland. The Darling Downs are among the best sheep-breeding districts of Australia, and it was to them that the earliest settlers were attracted. These pioneers maintained their position amidst many difficulties and dangers, but their enterprise and endurance have been amply rewarded. In the large pastoral establishments of this district, the arts of wool-growing and preparation for market are carried to a high degree of excellence. Progress is indicated by the following returns from Hayter's Year-Book of the number of live stock at these decennial periods :—

Year.	Horses.	Cattle.	Sheep.	Figs.
1865	51,091	848,346	6,594,966	14,888
1875	121,497	1,812,576	7,227,774	46,447
1885	253,116	4,266,172	9,308,911	51,796

Vegetation is luxuriant in Queensland, and as the soil and climate are better understood and greater care exercised in the selection of crops, the prospects of agriculturists are steadily improving. Maize, arrowroot, and cotton promise to be important staples, although the production of the latter has been checked of late years by the low prices ruling in the markets; the produce of maize for the season 1884-5 was 1,312,939 bushels. The extent to which wheat is grown, and the success which attends its cultivation, vary considerably in succeeding years, as will be seen by the following return :—

Year	1880	1881	1882	1883	1884
Acres under wheat . .	10,944	4,708	10,494	9,879	12,105

Bananas, oranges, and pine-apples grow well in the rich soil and tropical climate of Queensland, and form valuable articles of export to the southern colonies. Among the novelties noted in the London markets during 1885 was some Queensland sugar, which sold at prices ranging up to 18*l.* per ton.

In the enumeration of the resources of the Colony, reference must be made to the vast forests of valuable timber, suitable for the purposes of the shipwright, the builder, and the cabinet-maker. Mahogany, cedar, satinwood, tulipwood, mountain ash, silky oak, mangrove, and myall are a few of the valuable woods which abound. Several species attain a gigantic growth. In a report by the Government botanist, mention is made of a tree growing on Johnstone river, near Caldwell, having a girth, at three feet from the ground, of 150 feet, and at a height of 55 feet, measuring 88 feet round. Mr. Hill calculated that if the base of the tree had been hollow 440 men could have stood within it, or that a stable with 37 stalls, each measuring 6 feet by 8, could have been constructed in its interior. In this tree there were 60,000 cubic feet of timber. Some of the trees in Gippsland, Victoria, are over 400 feet high. During the first twenty-four years of its independent existence, a period which expired in December, 1883, the Colony exported by sea 4,070,250 ounces of gold, valued at 14,939,304*l.* This only includes a portion of the product, a considerable amount finding its way overland to New South Wales. In a report recently issued, the Deputy Master of the Sydney mint states, that "of the 422,160·20 ounces received for coinage during the year ending December 31st, 1885, 300,110·15 came from Queensland." There is reason to believe that a considerable portion of the yearly yield of the mines is carried overland, and consequently does not appear in the export returns. There are also extensive deposits of copper. In 1866 the export of this metal was valued at 31,356*l.* In 1872 the out-put realized 196,000*l.*; and in 1877, notwithstanding the reduction in prices, 167,337*l.* Since that period, owing to previous over-speculation and the fall in values, the copper mines have been neglected. The stanniferous fields of Queensland are exceedingly rich, and cover an area of at least 600 square miles. In 1873 the value of the tin exported was 370,912*l.*, but in 1879 it was only 120,351*l.* Silver and antimony are found in payable quantities. Bismuth ore yielding 72 per cent. of metal has been raised, but "the absence of a market in the colonies, and the uncertainty of the price obtainable in England, have had the effect of discouraging the miners, and the work was discontinued." Precious stones are occasionally found. There are large deposits of iron ore in various parts, and the coal-fields are in profitable working. In remote districts, towards the Gulf of Carpentaria, there are undeveloped stores of mineral wealth.

The fisheries along the coast of Queensland are very productive. Oysters, bêche-de-mer, pearl, and tortoiseshell are exported in large quantities. The dugong, a marine animal peculiar to these waters, has many valuable qualities, which have been thus described :— "Its flesh is palatable and nutritious, its bones dense, and well adapted for manufacturing purposes; the oil prepared from its fat is quite equal in value, medicinally, to cod-liver oil, and far less nauseous; its short tusks are of fine-grained ivory, and its hide, when tanned, makes exceedingly thick, tough leather."

The manufacturing industries of the Colony include woollen-mills, sugar-mills, tanneries, arrow-root factories, boiling-down and meat-preserving establishments, &c. The total export of articles produced or manufactured in the Colony for the year 1884 was valued at 4,553,477*l.* The total annual values of the imports and exports at various dates are thus recorded:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1860	£742,023	£523,476
1873	2,885,499	3,542,513
1884	6,381,976	4,673,864

The Banks of the Colony were, on the 30th June, 1885, able to show assets to the amount of 12,098,530*l.*, against liabilities of 7,823,350*l.* The note issues of the eight institutions amounted to 611,220*l.* The deposits in their charge were 6,258,860*l.*, and in their strong rooms were coin and bullion to the value of 1,283,300*l.*

Queensland has upwards of 1,200 miles of railway, and the construction of an additional 750 has been authorized by Parliament. Telegraphic communication is maintained over more than 7,000 miles of line. The revenues of the Colony, according to the returns issued at the close of the year 1885, show a good increase, the amount for the quarter ending December 31st, 1885, being 54,181*l.* in excess of that for the corresponding period of 1884.

With advantages of climate, an extensive territory, and liberal land laws, a prosperous future appears to be in store for Queensland. Specially in its favour are the large areas it is enabled to offer for pastoral settlement, its mineral wealth and boundless forests, and its capabilities for supplying its southern neighbours with articles of tropical and semi-tropical produce. Queensland encourages immigration more than any other of the Australasian colonies.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Though Western Australia was the first part of the continent which became at all familiar to navigators, this Colony occupies the least prominent position. It has an unrivalled territory, with only 46,000 people, and is the land of the future.

The visits to its shores of the early Dutch explorers have already been referred to. From the time when the 'Gulde Zeepaard' was off the coast in 1627, the first known visitor was Dampier, who landed in 1688, and again in 1696. Nearly a century passed, during which no vessel appeared in these waters; but in 1791 King George's Sound was entered by Captain Vancouver, the English explorer. He was closely followed by the French Admiral D'Entrecasteaux, in 1792. Both Captain Baudin and Captain Flinders were here in 1802. Surveys of portions of the coast were made by Captain King in the years 1820-4, and by Captains Wickham and Stokes in 1837-45.

The first attempt at settlement was made in 1825 by Major Lockyer, with a small party of convicts from Sydney. Captain Sterling began in 1827 the exploration of the interior. The favourable reports which he furnished led to the formation of an association to establish a free settlement at Swan River. To this end an arrangement was made with the Colonial Office, by which settlers received grants of land, at the rate of forty acres for every 3*l.* of capital they were prepared to invest in improvements. Similar grants were made to those who at their own charge introduced labouring persons and their families, at the rate of 200 acres for every man, woman, or child over ten years of age, and smaller grants of 40 to 160 acres in consideration for the introduction of still younger members of these families. Under these conditions a number of persons were induced to interest themselves in the project for forming a new colony; Captain Sterling was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Colony, his emolument consisting of 10,000 acres of land.

The first settlers arrived at Swan River in August, 1829, and by the close of the year the colonists numbered 850, there being 440 also non-resident investors; 525,000 acres of land had been allotted, and 41,550*l.* was set down as capital invested in the Colony. The best commentary on the success of this enterprise is the fact that some trading vessels, arriving from New South Wales and Tasmania with cargoes of flour, had little difficulty in extorting 100*l.* per ton from the famishing settlers, and in obtaining as many passengers on their return voyage as their ships would contain. In this way many left for the other colonies, and thus escaped further hardships; but there were others who had not the means to leave, and their condition was truly pitiable. In consequence of the failure of the private colonization scheme, the English Government resumed possession in 1848. About this time the Eastern Colonies were demanding the discontinuance of transportation, and the home authorities were glad to accede to the desire of Western Australia for convict labourers, whose services were turned to good account in the making of roads, bridges, &c. The expenditure in connection with the penal establishments was also a source of considerable support to the settlers. Transportation was finally abolished in this Colony in 1868.

In the early days the revenue and expenditure were on a restricted scale; in 1835 the amounts were 6,884*l.* and 5,291*l.* In 1857, when the finances had been stimulated by Imperial Governmental expenditure, the revenue increased to 89,079*l.*, and the expenditure to 90,100*l.* After the cessation of transportation better results were shown, the returns for 1884 being 290,319*l.* and 291,307*l.*

Western Australia is the most sparsely populated of the Australian colonies; it is, in fact, nearly empty, its white inhabitants at the close of 1884 numbering only 32,958, in a colony eight times the area of the British Isles. Owing to the scarcity of labour, and the distance of markets for the sale of produce, the agriculturists of Western Australia have had up-hill work. According to the latest returns, 79,669 acres have been brought under cultivation, and amongst the products of last year's (1885) harvest were 382,400 bushels of wheat, 26,140 bushels of oats, 92,660 bushels of barley, 1,500 tons of potatoes, and 24,050 tons of hay.

The vast territories of Western Australia afford an almost unlimited field for the development of pastoral enterprise, and, as every encouragement is now being given to those who desire to take up large blocks of land for grazing purposes, a speedy increase in the returns of this industry may be anticipated. The following figures will afford an idea of progress made:—

Year.	Horses.	Cattle.	Sheep.	Pigs.
1829	57	204	1,096	106
1856	2,635	13,074	128,111	not known
1873	26,290	47,640	748,536	20,948
1885	37,111	71,102	1,547 061	20,039

The exports consist almost entirely of natural products. Their character is indicated in the list of the principal items shipped during the previous year, furnished to the Commissioners of the Melbourne International Exhibition, 1880-1:—

Gum	£3,584	Guano	12,041 tons
Sandalwood	4,666¾ tons	Pearl shell (Shark Bay)	603¾ ,,
Timber	12,545 loads	,, ,, (North-west)	470 ,,
Wool	3,505,688 lbs.	Lead ore	2,775 ,,

The total value of the exports in that year (1879) was 494,884*l.*, and of the imports 407,299*l.* In 1884 the exports were 405,693*l.*, and imports 521,167*l.* (Western Australia exports horses to India; also pearls.—Ed.)

There are four Banks in the Colony, which on the 30th June, 1885, held deposits amounting to 669,900*l.* They had coin and bullion to the value of 165,660*l.*, and notes in circulation representing 34,720*l.* Their total assets were 1,202,610*l.*, and their liabilities 720,750*l.* (Australasian Insurance and Banking Record).

About 300 miles of railway have been constructed by the Government, and also 2,000 miles of telegraph line.

Possessing a magnificent territory of 1,060,000 square miles, an immense seaboard, and many excellent harbours, it has also the advantage of being situated on one of the principal highways connecting the Old World with the other new lands of the South. Undeveloped stores of mineral wealth are known to be hidden in some portions of its soil, others are clothed with forests of valuable timber. The forest regions of extra-tropical Western Australia occupy an area equal to the whole of Great Britain, and well-grassed plains await the flocks and herds that shall, in due time, occupy them. Capital and labour, those twin giants of progress, too often found opposed to each other in the more crowded portions of the earth, will find in Western Australia ample scope, and a rich return for their united efforts, and will have cause to wonder at their long neglect of so promising a field. It is here that new colonies should be founded.

TASMANIA.

On the first day of December, 1642, Abel Jans Tasman anchored at Storm Bay, on the south-east coast of the island which now bears his name. His stay was short, as he set sail on the fifth of the same month, having on the second day of his visit caused the flag of the Stadtholder of Holland, Frederick Henry, the father of William III. of England, to be raised on the shore, which he imagined to form part of the mainland of Australia. This impression was shared by other navigators who visited the island, amongst whom were Captain Marian, the French explorer, who landed in 1772, Captain Furneaux, who came a year later, and Captain Cook in 1779. Captain Bligh, Admiral D'Entrecasteaux, and others also visited Tasmania prior to 1798, in which year Mr. Bass, surgeon, R.N., who had conceived the idea that the sea divided the territory from the continent, set sail, in company with Captain Flinders, in a small craft, and, passing through the strait, proved the correctness of his conjecture.

The first attempt to form a permanent settlement was made by Lieutenant Bowen, who was sent over from Sydney with a party of convicts in 1803. The experiment was not successful, but in the following year Colonel Collins, the failure of whose effort to form a settlement on the shores of Port Phillip has already been referred to, obtained permission to remove to the site selected by Bowen Risdon on the east bank of the Derwent. The first part of the expedition, which consisted of fourteen officers, military and civil, forty-four marines, and 367 convicts, arrived on the 30th January, and the remainder on the 16th February, 1804. Not being satisfied with the original location, the party soon removed to the site where Hobart now stands. The first house in Tasmania was built of wattle and dab, by Lieutenant Edward Lord, in what is now Macquarie Street.

Another convict settlement was established at Launceston, in the northern portion of the island, by Colonel Patterson, in October of the same year. Overland communication between the two settlements was established in 1807, Lieutenant Laycock of the Launceston establishment being the pioneer. The two settlements were at first entirely distinct, but in 1812 the seat of government was fixed at Hobart, and in February, 1813, Colonel Thomas Davey assumed the control of the island.

There is but little of industrial or commercial progress to record in connection with the early history of Tasmania, at that time known as Van Diemen's Land. It was pre-eminently a penal colony, and its story is one over which we have no need to linger. The tales of the famine, when kangaroo flesh sold for 1*s.* 6*d.* per lb., and even sea-weed became valuable as an article of food, of the Black War, and of the criminal exploits of the Bushrangers, can be read elsewhere.

In 1804 Colonel Collins introduced a few cattle from Bengal, and some sheep and cattle from New South Wales. In 1821 the live stock of the Colony consisted of 35,000 cattle, 170,000 sheep, 550 horses, and 5,000 swine. The first exportation of wool took place in 1819, when a small quantity, received in exchange for merchandise, by the captain of the ship 'Regalia' was taken to England by him and sold at a loss. This wool, when the 'Regalia' was in the London Docks, attracted the attention of Mr. Henry Hopkins. Shortly after his arrival in Hobart, Mr. Hopkins offered, by advertisement in the local papers of September, 1821, to purchase all wool at 4*d.* per lb. He was enabled to collect twelve bales, which realized 7*d.* per lb. in the London markets; but the profit was not sufficient to cover expenses. The amount obtained for this the first export of Tasmanian wool was 88*l.* The annual value at the end of the next four decades was: 1831, 57,725*l.*; 1841, 254,853*l.*; 1851, 249,953*l.*; 1861, 326,413*l.*; and twenty years later, in 1881, 498,400*l.*

Tasmania is celebrated for its stud sheep, the sale of which in the other colonies realized in one year 31,324*l.* In the same year 7,180*l.* was realized by the export of 137 draught-horses, and five head of cattle produced 225*l.* The pastoral wealth of the Colony is exhibited in the following return of the live stock in 1885: 27,188 horses, 128,834 cattle, 1,720,027 sheep, 57,303 pigs.

In the early days of the Colony much support was given to the local trade by the expenditure of Imperial funds in connection with the penal establishments. The system which led to this expenditure, amounting to upwards of 300,000*l.* per annum, ceased in 1853. The advantages which Tasmania derived from its occupation as a convict depôt were by no means of an unmixed character. It is due to the colonists to record that they were perfectly alive to this fact, and that the discontinuance of transportation was the result of their earnest and persevering protests. The official mind took a different view of the advantages arising from the penal establishments; and Sir William Denison prophesied that the cessation of the system would "turn Hobart into a fishing village." The stoppage of the expenditure arising from the source referred to would doubtless have been more severely felt, had it not happened that at this period there was a large demand from the adjacent colony of Victoria for those necessary supplies which Tasmania was best able to furnish. In 1854 the export of fruit and vegetables was valued at 106,320*l.*, and that of timber at 306,857*l.*, the total value of the exports being 1,433,021*l.* This amount is below that of the previous year, when the exports reached 1,756,316*l.*; but these figures have not been maintained, though the records of recent dates show a large increase over those of the earlier years of the Colony.

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Year.	Imports.	Exports.
1824	£62,000	£14,500	1864	£908,265	£975,730
1835	583,646	320,679	1874	1,257,785	925,325
1851	641,609	665,790	1884	1,656,118	1,475,857

Concerning the mineral resources of Tasmania, it may be briefly stated that those which have been developed consist chiefly of gold and tin. Of the former about 150,000*l.* worth has been raised. Copper, lead, bismuth, antimony, manganese, plumbago, and zinc have also been discovered. Silver is found mixed with other metals. Coal is distributed over the south-eastern portion of the island, but principally in places difficult of access, and so has not been made to an appreciable extent an article of commerce. There are abundant supplies of various descriptions of building stone, some of which are in great demand in the other colonies.

The Tasmanian whale-fisheries were, in the early days of the Colony, sources of considerable profit. At one time forty ships, carrying 1,000 men, with 200 boats and 2,000 tons of casks, were engaged in the trade, which in 1837 realized 135,210*l.* Even as late as 1862 we find twenty-five ships employed in this industry; but in 1879 the export of sperm oil had fallen to 245 tons, valued at 13,810*l.*

The first financial institution in Tasmania was the Bank of Van Diemen's Land, established at Hobart in 1823 by a joint-stock company. Its issues were made in Spanish dollars at 5*s.* currency. Another institution of a similar character was founded in 1827, under the name of the Derwent Bank. Shortly prior to this date, the currency of the Colony had been regulated by the Legislative Council of Van Diemen's Land, an enactment being passed directing that all money transactions should be expressed in pounds, shillings, and pence sterling, the Spanish dollar being still retained as a legal tender at the rate of 4*s.* 4*d.* sterling. These regulations, and the fact that the authorized issues of the Bank superseded the irregular paper currency of private individuals, had a very beneficial effect. A third bank was opened in 1828, at Launceston, and in 1833 a private establishment assumed the name of the Commercial Bank. In 1836 the total capital of the four associations was 130,000*l.*, their note circulation 45,000*l.*, deposits 160,000*l.*, and discounts 250,000*l.*, the rate of discount being ten per cent. On the 30th June, 1835, the deposits in the five banks now doing business in Tasmania amounted to 3,908,490*l.*; the total assets of these institutions being 4,101,360*l.*, and their liabilities 3,915,760*l.*

When the record of Tasmania is compared with the larger results arrived at in some of the other colonies, regard should be had to the fact that in extent it is the smallest of the group. Its total area is 26,375 square miles. The population in 1825 was 14,192; in 1865, 95,201; and 1885, 135,652; the area under cultivation at the latter date being 425,845 acres. Tasmania has a mild climate, and from the abundance of its fruit and flowers may justly be called "The Garden of the South."

NEW ZEALAND.

New Zealand was discovered by Abel Tasman on the 4th Jan., 1643. The visit of the explorer was marked by a melancholy incident—several sailors, who had landed to procure water, being killed by the natives. The locality near the north-west extremity of South Island still bears the name of Massacre Bay. Captain Marion, who visited New Zealand in 1772, was still more unfortunate, sharing himself the same fate with sixteen of his crew. A similar misfortune overtook ten of Captain Furneaux's men in 1773. Captain Cook visited New Zealand during his first voyage, sighting land at Poverty Bay, Oct. 16, 1769.

The early history of New Zealand settlement is of too intricate a character to enter upon here in detail. Runaway sailors, escapees from Tasmania, together with missionaries, were among the first white inhabitants of the island. The advent of the missionaries appears to have taken place about the year 1814. From a date prior to this, whaling vessels had found, in the harbours along the coast, convenient ports of call.

Although Captain Cook had formally taken possession of New Zealand on behalf of the English Government, it was not till 1837 that steps were taken to represent British authority in the islands by the appointment of Mr. Busby as Consul. In 1840 more decisive action was taken; the English authorities, who hearing that France proposed to establish a colony on South Island, despatched Captain Hobson with instructions to proclaim New Zealand a British dependency.

This long delay on the part of the Imperial Government was productive of great disorder, and the authorities of the new settlement found themselves confronted with many conflicting claims. For years previously persons had purchased lands from the native chiefs. As early as 1825 an association was formed in London, under the presidency of Earl Durham, for the purpose of securing land on the Thames. A similar association, the New Zealand Company, purchased in 1839, through Colonel Wakefield, a large area on terms somewhat akin to those on which John Batman endeavoured to secure an estate at Port Phillip. For 320*l.* worth of blankets, soap, tobacco, night-caps, umbrellas, gunpowder, slate-pencils, Jews-harps, pocket-knives, and sealing-wax, a large territory was conveyed to him. Out of this and other similar transactions countless difficulties arose, which were ultimately arranged by compromise; and by 1841 something like order had been established. The settlement of the native claims was a matter of great difficulty, and was not accomplished until after long delay and more than one disastrous war.

Colonization after 1841 went on favourably; about 1848 two enterprises of a semi-religious character were organized in Great Britain for the purpose of establishing settlements on the islands. One of these, under the auspices of the Free Church of Scotland, took up nearly 500,000 acres near Otago. The other, a Church of England Association, secured 2,000,000 acres in South Island. Financial difficulties compelled both of these companies to yield up their charters in 1852. A similar fate, about the same time, overtook a French association, formed for the purpose of effecting a settlement at Banks's Peninsula. These organizations had been the means of introducing to New Zealand a large number of immigrants, well suited to be the pioneers of a prosperous community. At a later period the task of drawing population to the Colony was energetically undertaken by the local Government. In the eleven years, 1873-83, 102,612 assisted immigrants landed in the Colony, a number equal to nearly one-fifth of the population at the close of the latter year. The gold discoveries of 1860-4 attracted to New Zealand a large accession of population, of which many came from Australia. The number of inhabitants given at various dates by the Registrar-General of New Zealand is as follows :—

Years.	Inhabitants.	Years.	Inhabitants.
1843	13,128	1864	173,618
1854	32,554	1876	399,075
1860	79,711	1885	576,234

The total area of New Zealand is 104,403 square miles. It is about 1,000 miles in length, and has a coast-line of over 3,000 miles. The general healthfulness of the climate is attested by the fact that the death-rate of this Colony is the lowest in Australasia. Owing to the recent influx of adult immigrants, a large proportion of the colonists are at healthy ages; but after making all due allowances for this circumstance, it must be admitted that, in contrast with the death-rates of the United Kingdom,—about 20·1 per 1,000 for the years 1864-82,—and of European nations, which range from 17·0 in Norway to 38·7 in Hungary, such records as those of 10·13 in 1871 and 10·39 in 1884 can scarcely be regarded as less than phenomenal. (See Hayter's Year-Book for 1885, pp. 231-3.)

It has been estimated, that in the whole of New Zealand there are 50,000,000 acres suitable for pasture, and 12,000,000 for cultivation. Of these, according to the returns for 1884-5, 1,348,235 acres were under tillage against 361,527 in 1864, and 607,138 in 1875. Not included in this record are over 5,000,000 acres laid down under choice grasses. The cereals principally cultivated are wheat, oats, and barley. The fertility of the soil is attested by an average yield per acre, for the twelve years 1873-1884, of 26·28 bushels of wheat, as compared with 11·6 bushels in the Australian colonies, and 18·19 bushels in Tasmania.

Owing to the suitability of the soil and climate for the rearing of stock, pastoral pursuits have been carried on under favourable conditions. The following are the returns of live stock from the Registrar-General's Statistics :—

Year.	Horses.	Cattle.	Sheep.	Pigs.
1858	14,912	137,204	1,523,324	40,734
1864	49,409	249,760	4,937,273	61,276
1874	99,859	494,917	11,704,853	123,921
1881	161,736	698,637	12,985,085	200,083

Since the census of 1881 no official statement of the number of live stock has been issued, but the number of sheep in the Colony at the commencement of 1886 has been estimated at 15,686,310. The value of the export of wool in 1853 was 66,508*l.*, in 1870 it was 1,703,944*l.*, and in 1884, 3,267,527*l.* (Later statistics are appended.—Ed.)

Gold was first discovered in 1842, but it was not until ten years later that gold-mining took a recognized position amongst the industries of the Colony. In 1857 the value of the export was 40,442*l.*, but in 1860 it had fallen to 17,585*l.* In the following year, owing to extensive discoveries in the South Island, the export rose to 752,657*l.* In 1863 it was 2,432,479*l.*, and in 1866, 2,897,412*l.* This high rate of production has not been maintained. The yield for 1883 was valued at 892,445*l.*, and that for 1885 at 948,615*l.* The total value of the gold raised in the colony to Dec. 31st, 1885, has been roughly estimated at 42,000,000*l.*

Among the other minerals found are copper, silver, and tin. Coalfields of considerable extent are being profitably worked, and extensive discoveries of kerosene shale have been made. On some adjacent islands are large desposits of sulphur.

From the forests of New Zealand, timber has been exported in quantities which have varied, according to the demand, during the past sixteen years, from 18,509*l.* in 1870, to 51,527*l.* in 1880. Kauri gum is found in large quantities in the forest lands. The value of this article has been subject to considerable fluctuations: in 1853 it was quoted at 20*l.* per ton, in 1860 at 10*l.*; but at more recent dates quotations of 60*l.* and upwards have been reached. One of the largest exports was made in 1880, the value in that year being 242,817*l.*

As might be expected from its position and extensive sea-board, the shipping of the Colony is very considerable. A large provincial trade is carried on by steamers and coasting-vessels. The extent of the shipping trade is indicated by the following table of the vessels entered and cleared at New Zealand ports in various years, together with the value of the imports and exports:—

Year.	No. of Vessels.	Total Tonnage.	Imports.	Exports.
1876	1,744	786,514	£6,905,171	£5,673,465
1880	1,516	819,716	6,162,011	6,352,692
1884	1,724	1,063,430	7,663,888	7,091,667

The returns of the external trade of the Colony during 1885 exhibited a decrease of about 200,000*l.* as compared with those of 1884; the deficiency, however, arose in the earlier part of the year, and the statement for the closing quarter, ending Dec. 31st, 1885, showed a satisfactory increase of 148,000*l.* on that of the corresponding period of the preceding year. In this connection it may be mentioned, that an import and export trade, which may at no distant date assume considerable importance, is being cultivated between the New Zealand ports and the islands of the South Pacific, including Fiji.

The manufacturing industries of New Zealand have of late years undergone a very rapid development. New enterprises are daily springing into existence for the supply of local requirements. In addition to the industries of older growth, such as tanneries, saw-mills, fellmongeries, and ship-building yards, some extensive factories have, at more recent dates, been established. Among these are woollen, paper, pottery, and furniture manufactures. One of the latest enterprises is the establishment of works at Auckland for the conversion of the titanic-iron sand of the Colony into iron and steel. The prospects of these branches of industry are of an encouraging character, and, to quote a local report, "there seems no reason why New Zealand, possessed of extensive coal-fields, an abundance of raw material, and other natural advantages, should not become in time distinguished as a manufacturing as well as a gold-exporting, pastoral, and agricultural colony."

There are six Banking Institutions in New Zealand, which, according to the returns issued at the close of the financial year, June 30th, 1885, held assets amounting to 18,500,000*l.* against liabilities of 10,948,580*l.*, the amount deposited in their charge being 9,884,780*l.*

About 13,000,000*l.* has been expended by New Zealand in the construction of railways, and a large sum in other works of a reproductive character; and though some think the Colony has over borrowed, there is no rational doubt as to the value of its securities. The Government cannot be charged with timidity in regard to their financial operations, and at the present time the propriety of incurring larger responsibilities is being vigorously discussed in political and commercial circles. There are indications that the Colony is now passing through a crisis in its history. In its unsurpassed soil and climate, and the energy of its people, New Zealand possesses a well-grounded assurance of an enduring and increasing prosperity.

FIJI.

Fiji consists of 250 islands, about 100 of which are inhabited. The group was discovered by Tasman on the 5th of March, 1643; it was towards the close of the following century visited by Captain Cook, Captain Bligh, and others; but it was not until after the establishment of the penal settlements in New South Wales that any Europeans attempted to permanently settle on the islands. The first settlers were, according to the Rev. Thomas Williams, author of Fiji and the Fijians, men of the most repulsive character—escaped convicts, as savage as the cannibals by whom they were surrounded. Vile as these men undoubtedly were, they possessed the force of character which belongs to a superior race. "It was through their influence that Mbau and Rewa first assumed a position of superiority over the other islands of the group—a position which the former still, although under entirely different conditions, retains" (The Colony of Fiji, p. 3, by Hon. J. B. Thurston. G. L. Griffiths. Levuka: 1880). Other circumstances tended gradually to promote settlement of a more desirable character. Tortoise-shell, sandalwood, pearl-shell, and bêche-de-mer were obtainable on favourable terms by shippers visiting the islands. For the purposes of the commerce thus inaugurated, a small settlement was established at Levuka in 1835. About 1851 the gold discoveries of California gave rise to considerable traffic between Sydney, Melbourne, and San Francisco, and many gold-seekers calling at Fiji, charmed with the aspect and freedom of the country, returned to it when it was no longer easy to make rapid fortunes at the mines.

The European population at first increased slowly; in 1861 (quoting from the authority cited) they numbered 166 adults, a large proportion of whom were highly respectable people. In 1873 the white population was supposed to number about 3,000. The official estimate of the entire population at more recent dates is given in the Victorian Year-Book as follows:—

Year.	Males.	Females.	Total.
1878	64,748	52,350	117,098
1880	67,598	54,286	121,884
1882	72,376	57,703	130,079
1884	70,856	57,558	128,414

The population in 1885 was about 130,000, constituted thus:—

Europeans	3,500
Natives	117,500
Half-castes	800
Asiatics and Polynesians	8,200
Total	130,000

Negotiations, commenced in 1859, and not completed until 1874, resulted in the sovereignty of the islands being, with the consent of the native chiefs, ceded to the British Crown, and almost immediately Fiji was incorporated as a Crown Colony. This settlement had a most beneficial effect on the prospects of the Colony, whose constitutional history may be regarded as having commenced on the 1st September, 1875, on which date the government of the Colony was assumed by Sir A. H. Gordon, K.C.M.G.

The years which followed were till of late marked by prosperity and progress. In 1880 the committee appointed to promote the representation of the Colony at the Melbourne International Exhibition were enabled to report that business was increasing steadily, and was conducted upon sounder principles than formerly. Capital had been invested in the production of sugar, coffee, cotton, copra, cocoa, cloves, cinnamon, camphor, coir, tea, tobacco, cinchona, arrowroot, cocoanuts, rice, maize, tapioca, vanilla, pepper, spices, and other tropical products, and there was every reason to hope for a certain and regular improvement in the social and commercial position of the community. That these expectations have been already to some extent realized, is shown by the following statistics of the external trade of Fiji:—

Year.	Inward Shipping. Vessels.	Inward Shipping. Tons.	Outward Shipping. Vessels.	Outward Shipping. Tons.	Imports, Value.	Exports, Value.
1878	124	23,180	128	24,080	£136,608	£192,865
1880	157	32,933	150	32,689	185,741	229,528
1882	163	43,768	165	43,757	303,329	190,517
1884	150	63,246	144	64,731	434,522	345,344

The soils found on the different islands are generally of excellent quality, but vary in their capabilities. To this cause, and to the favouring influences of the climate, Fiji is indebted for the variety of its vegetable products, which include not only the sugar-cane, rice, coffee, cotton, bread-fruit, and other tropical plants, but also many forms of vegetation indigenous to more temperate climes. The extent of land under cultivation, according to the latest return, is 35,608 acres; the total area alienated from the Crown to the end of 1884 being 350,726 acres; the live stock returns for the same year being—

Horses	610	Sheep	5,689
Cattle	4,600	Pigs	50,000

There are on several of the islands extensive forests of valuable timber, and indications have been discovered of valuable mineral deposits awaiting development.

NEW GUINEA.

Don Jorge de Menenis, a Portuguese explorer, was the first European who landed upon the shores of Papua, in 1526. Nineteen years later Ynigo Ortez de Retz, a Spaniard, visited it, and re-named it "Nueva Guinea," as it appeared to him that its shores resembled the Guinea coast of West Africa. Alvarez de Saavedra called it "Isla del Oro," believing it to contain rich deposits of the precious metal; and Admiral de Quiros bestowed upon it the name of "Australia del Espiritu Santo," believing it to form a portion of the Continent. Various other explorers visited the island, but no attempt at settlement was made until 1828, when a small Dutch colony was established on the north-west coast. The experiment was not successful, and the settlement was soon abandoned. In 1864 an association was formed at Sydney to colonize New Guinea, but failing to secure the sanction of the Imperial authorities, it was dissolved. In 1867 the Rev. Mr. Chalmers and Mr. Chester visited the south-east part of the island, and mission stations were established. Captain Moresby made surveys of the coast in 1871 and 1876. Since the latter date various expeditions have explored the interior. Several of these were specially organized with a view of testing the alleged auriferous character of the country. They succeeded in finding traces of gold, but not in payable quantities. Two of the Melbourne daily papers each sent a well-equipped expedition to explore New Guinea, and the Royal Geographical Society of Australasia has done much to prepare the way for its civilization. Several scientific explorers have been very successful in obtaining the objects of their quest. Messrs. D'Albertis and Beccari recently returned to Europe with 5,000 species of its flora, and 100,000 of New Guinea fauna, of which 10,000 birds and 80,000 insects were deposited by them in the museums of Genoa and Florence.

Favourable reports have been received from both missionaries and explorers in regard to the capabilities of the soil. Rice, maize, sago, sugar-cane, cocoanuts, tobacco, and other descriptions of tropical produce are cultivated by the natives, and cedar, camphor-trees, sago-palms, and wild nutmegs abound in the forests.

Mr. Hartog, a Dutch merchant of Macassar, in 1877 visited McCluer Inlet, which the traders from Ceram had been in the habit of calling at irregularly. He describes the natives with whom he was brought into contact as neither savage, treacherous, nor cunning, but rather lively and energetic, and showing great eagerness to trade. The coast tribes act as intermediaries between the traders and the Alfuras of the interior, about forty villages, with an aggregate population of 20,000 Papuans, forming a cordon of trading centres round the Bay. He estimates the value of the commerce of the Gulf at from 80,000*l.* to 90,000*l.* annually, and considers it capable of great expansion.

The population of the whole island has been variously stated at from 200,000 to 800,000 persons. The Rev. Mr. Chalmers, who from his long residence on the islands may be regarded as the best authority, inclines to the belief that the lower estimate is the most likely to approach the truth. British New Guinea is the natural appanage of Queensland, a colony quite capable of undertaking its entire control.

NORFOLK ISLAND.

By Isaac Robinson, Registrar.

Norfolk Island is in lat. 29° 2′ S. and long. 168° 0′ E., and is distant about 980 miles N.N.E. from Sydney; it is 5½ miles long, by 3½ broad, and contains an area of about 9,000 acres. Two small islands lie off the south side—Phillip Island, of no very great extent, distant about four miles, and Nepean, a small rocky islet close by the big island.

Norfolk Island was once a dependency of New South Wales, and later on of Tasmania, when for a number of years it was a convict station of no very savoury reputation. In 1855 the convicts were withdrawn, and the island was offered to the Pitcairn Islanders (descendants of the mutineers of the 'Bounty'), which offer was accepted, and the emigrants landed there on the 8th June, 1856. The Melanesian mission, whose important work in the Western Pacific, under the guidance of Bishop Selwyn, is so widely known, has here also its head-quarters.

There is no harbour; the anchorage called Sydney Bay on the south side is very unsafe, and hard on a vessel's ground-tackle, on account of the rocky bottom; but on the north side there is a landing-rock much used, called the Cascades, which is calmer and safer, and in much better repute with sailors. All the traffic has to be done in whale-boats, which are marvellously well handled by the Pitcairners, who often work in seas that would make the stoutest heart quail.

The principal occupation of the islanders is cottage farming and whaling, which latter pursuit they follow with much dexterity, to the detriment, it is said, of the other business. There are three whaling companies, who equip seven boats, which from July to the end of October, when the weather permits, are almost always afloat. The whales (the 'humpback') only visit the island during these months. The 'take' varies much, and of late years has fallen off considerably, possibly the low price of the article ruling acting as a deterrent.

The soil is basaltic and very fertile; the sweet potato, Irish potato, corn, yams, bananas, arrow-root, sugar-cane, and English vegetables are produced in quantities, and sub-tropical fruits, such as the mango, date plum, guava, eugenias, cherimoyers, and loquats are grown to perfection, while the English apple and pear, and such-like grow and thrive well. The indigenous flora is, or rather was, the paradise of the botanist, on account of the peculiar character of its botany, but the overstocking which has been allowed to prevail for years past has destroyed much of the underscrub and vegetation. The encroachment too of the pests cassia lavigata and the two solanums (S. sodomaeum and auriculatum) will in a few years, if nothing is done to counteract the evil, destroy all its grazing capabilities; nevertheless there is a peculiar charm about the place which no defect can eradicate.

The government of the island is vested in three officials, a chief magistrate and two councillors, who are elected by the people, and who act under commissions issued by the Governor of New South Wales, who holds a separate commission as Governor of Norfolk Island. By powers granted by Her Majesty when the island was given over, the people have many privileges, the principal of which is making laws and governing their own internal affairs. But successive governors have, it is stated, encroached on these powers, till now nothing is left but the shell. There is no prison or lock-up, and as yet none wanted, no really serious case having ever occurred in the annals of the community.

The executive at present ruling are: Mr. Stephen Christian, Chief Magistrate; Seymour Buffett, First Councillor; Isaac Robinson, Second Councillor.

The Melanesian Mission is a community of itself, and does not in any way participate in the government of the island. At the college, the natives who are brought there from time to time in the mission vessel are taught the industrial arts, and when suitable are prepared for the ministry. A barquentine, the 'Southern Cross,' plies constantly between the headquarters at the island and the numerous stations at the Hebrides, Banks, Solomons, and Santa Cruz, except during the hurricane months from December to March, when the vessel is laid up in Auckland. The chief of the mission is the Right Rev. John Richardson Selwyn, D.D., Bishop of Melanesia; the principal, the Rev. R. H. Codrington, D.D., a Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford, and a distinguished scholar who has given nearly a lifetime of honorary labour to this work. The other members of the staff are the Reverends John Palmer, Charles Bice, R. B. Comins, J. H. Plant, A. Brittain, and Culwick, besides numerous native deacons and teachers.

Kington, the 'town,' as it is called, is on the south side, and was in the convict times the principal centre. It was here that the Government house, barracks, jail, officers' and officials' houses were situated, and was no doubt an important place; now, however, although the Government house and private buildings are occupied, the jail and most of the other public edifices are in ruins, giving to the place a rather dismal appearance.

The Rev. T. P. Thorman is the chaplain, and Dr. P. H. Metcalfe is the island surgeon.

There are 2000 sheep, 1360 cattle, and 270 horses on the island; and the population, Norfolk Island Community, 496, Melanesian Mission, 224, total, 720, all told. The signals for the island are:—The flagstaff is on a bump or hill on the west side of the town; red flag or ensign, good landing; black over ensign, no landing—go to Cascade; black flag, no landing either side.

AUSTRALASIA.

By the Editor.

"Let Australasia rise, her flag unfurled,
The New Britannia of the Southern World."—W. C. Wentworth.

In the foregoing pages a glance has been taken at the origin, progress, and actual position of each individual colony of that important group, which is collectively becoming better known to the world at large under the title of Australasia. It remains briefly to view the progress and condition of these colonies as a whole.

In addition to the five continental states of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland South Australia, with its Northern Territory, and Western Australia, Australasia comprises also the important insular countries of New Zealand, Tasmania, Fiji, and south-east New Guinea, as also Norfolk Island, a tiny appanage, as it may be called, of New South Wales.

From the day when the first puny settlement was formed a century ago upon the tree-clad and flowery shores of Port Jackson, down to the present time, Australasia has been growing and gaining strength, till now it has become a new nation, having aims and aspirations of its own, and constituting a veritable imperium in imperio, a half-federated dominion within the British Empire. Whether the complete federation of these colonies is to be accomplished by the shock of a war of invasion, or by masterly statesmanship in peace, is a matter of pure speculation. It is satisfactory, however, to know that from Perth to Wellington, and from Hobart to Townsville, the almost unanimous opinion of the people is for a more complete union, differences being merely as to the best mode of accomplishing that. Great as has indubitably been the progress of Australasia in the past, and far greater as it promises to be in the future, if a judgment is to be formed from the example of America, it is certain that Federal Unity must be an important factor in the rate of national growth. For all social purposes Australasia is united already as closely as the various English counties. For commercial union a zollverein, postal uniformity, and railway extension, are the chief requisites. For political union a Central Government is required to deal with national questions. At present the voice of Australasia in the councils of the Empire is weak, because divided, and enormous territories of excellent land lie waste from want of a truly national régime such as that in the United States. Through this the progress of the Continent is undoubtedly retarded, rapid though it has been; while through sheer want of population over extensive tracts there is nothing beyond the protecting ægis of the British fleet to prevent a foreign power, in event of war, seizing and holding successfully considerable portions of our territory. These momentous topics will no doubt engage the attention of Australasian statesmen, and great in history will be the name of him whose genius solves the practical difficulties attending complete federation. Meanwhile, better than eloquence the following unadorned facts and figures will show clearly our rate of prcgress in the past, as well as convey an idea of what it promises to be.

Land.—The area of Australasia is 3,169,389 square miles. The area of Great Britain is 88,006 square miles. Australasia, therefore, is thirty-six times larger than Great Britain. Had the Imperial Government when it gave away Australasia to a handful of colonists reserved the then unoccupied land for Imperial purposes, the sale of this land at the low price of 1*l.* per acre would have sufficed to pay off the National Debt of the United Kingdom twice. But because the Imperial Government of that day set little or no value on this land, the majority of English people have held it ever since in similar estimation. Of this enormous area given away, exceeding in extent and equalling in fertility the empire handed over by Charles V. of Germany to Philip II. of Spain, part has lately been sold at a rate of over a quarter of a million pounds sterling per acre in Collins Street, Melbourne. Melbourne is now a city of 375,000 persons, where fifty-three years ago no white man had appeared. The Australasian people at present possess 526 acres of land per head, a ratio far exceeding that of any other nation.

Population.—The coloured population of Australasia amounts to about 350,000, of whom about six-sevenths are in New Guinea and Fiji; there being still some 40,000 Maories in New Zealand, and about 25,000 Blacks in Australia. Setting the coloured races aside, the white population of Australasia has increased as follows:—

Year.	Persons.	Year.	Persons.	Year.	Persons.
1788	1,030	1860 . . .	1,220,884	1886 . . .	3,500,000
1828 . . .	54,726	1884 . . .	3,233,041	1887 . . .	3,750,000

At the rate of increase made between 1871 and 1881, Mr. H. H. Hayter, C.M.G., the Government Statist, Melbourne, calculates that the white population of Australasia in the year 1981 will be 93,865,138 persons.

Health.—The annual death-rate in the United Kingdom for the year 1882 was 19·2 per 1,000 persons. That of Australasia, exclusive of New Guinea and Fiji, was 14·99 per 1,000. The healthiest climate known to statisticians is that of New Zealand, which in the same year had a death rate of only 11·19 per 1,000. The exceptional salubrity of the climates of these colonies is attributable mainly to their position between the Pacific and Indian Oceans. They have what geographers call the most 'insular' climate, i. e. they have the full benefit of sea breezes.

Life Assurance.—The most successful Life Assurance Institute in the British Empire is the Australian Mutual Provident Society, whose head-quarters are at Sydney, and it does a purely Australasian business.

Trade.—The External Trade of Australasia has increased as follows:—

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.	Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total.
1825	£390,000	£115,000	£505,000	1873	£42,218,025	£42,017,799	£84,235,824
1851	4,132,521	4,598,518	8,731,039	1884	64,435,642	54,918,100	119,353,742

The average rate of imports and exports per head of population in 1883 for the United Kingdom was 8*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*; for the United States, 3*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*; for Australasia, 18*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*

Shipping.—Tonnage of Australasian shipping:—

Year.	Tons.	Year.	Tons.
1874	5,824,976	1884	13,047,680

Wool.—The Wool Exports of Australasia have increased as follows:—

Year.	lbs.	Value	Year.	lbs.	Value	Year.	lbs.	Value
1806	245	Unspecified.	1836	5,240,090	Unspecified.	1853	40,861,427	Unspecified.
1816	13,611	,,	1845	24,177,317	,,	1883	414,532,562	£21,330,381
1826	1,106,302	,,

The American Consul at Sydney, Mr. Griffin, in a report to the United States Government, remarks that in the history of commerce there is nothing to compare with the rapid and enormous expansion of the Australasian Wool Trade. In the great wool colony, New South Wales, after several years of drought, now happily ended by abundant rains, that colony had the same number of sheep as at the commencement of the drought, a fact which speaks eloquently for the future of this staple when a proper system of water-storage, sinking, and irrigation is adopted.

Live Stock.—The live stock of Australasia for two years is chiefly as follows:—

Year.	Sheep.	Cattle.	Horses.	Pigs.	Year.	Sheep.	Cattle.	Horses.	Pigs.
1884	74,351,823	8,183,345	1,272,630	989,031	1885	82,169,364	8,068,170	1,328,456	1,179,851

Of the sheep, 37,820,906 belong to New South Wales. Queensland is the great colony for cattle. It possesses 4,162,652 head of cattle, i. e. more than the rest of Australasia combined.

Cereals.—The chief cereals of Australasia are for the Year.	Wheat.	Barley.	Oats.	Maize.

1884	37,357,837	2,925,072	18,125,624	4,480,162 bushels.

Of this wheat, South Australia alone yielded 14,621,755 bushels.

Wine.—In the year 1884 over 1,853,007 gallons of wine were produced in the Continent of Australia alone, and in 1885 as much as 2,225,618 gallons. The five colonies forming that Continent have between them as much good vine land as Italy, France, and Spain together.

Gold.—The amount of gold accounted for in Australasia, from its first discovery in 1851 to 1884 inclusive, was 306,512,479*l.* Of this total, Victoria yielded 211,971,072*l.* No one can tell what store is yet left in the soil, and reefs of various colonies, but the Melbournec and Sydney mints are coining gold all the year round, and now supply a large share of the gold currency of the United Kingdom. The Spanish galleons taken by Raleigh and Drake were not as rich prizes as the regular steamers plying between England and Australasia.

Coal.—Value of output in 1884, 1,366,898*l.* More than four-fifths of this is from New South Wales. New Zealand returns are not included in this amount.

Conclusion.—These facts and figures go to show that Australasian trade is the prize of the commercial world. Owing to the high price of labour and scarcity of coal and iron in these colonies, and the rapidly-increasing demand for agricultural, mining, railway, and other machinery, as well as all articles of luxury, nothing can keep out English, American, French, and German manufactures. It rests to be seen in what proportion these nations will compete for Australasian business.

Copies of these Australasian Facts and Figures were recently sent to the chief journals of the United Kingdom, and elicited many comments. The Western Daily Press of Bristol in a sub-leader summarizes the facts in the following remarks:—

"The figures relating to the area of Australasia and its products show how enormous are the interests that have grown up at the Antipodes within a comparatively recent period. Australasia is thirty-six times larger than Great Britain—a fact which ought to be kept in mind when we are talking about an outlet for our surplus population. Fifty-three years ago not a single white man was to be found where the city of Melbourne now stands. That city has a population of 375,000. The coloured population in those distant colonies is about 350,000, and the white population exceeds three-and-a-half millions. Ninety-nine years ago there were only 1,030 white persons in Australasia. The growth of the trade is shown by a comparison of the imports and exports now with those of sixty years ago, the total having sprung up in this period from 505,000*l.* to 119,393,742*l.* The increase of the live stock is also astonishing. Australasia has 82,000,000 of sheep, 8,000,000 of cattle, and over

1,000,000 each of horses and pigs. The production of wheat in 1884 was 37,000,000 bushels. In 1885 Australia made upwards of two millions of gallons of wine. The mainspring of this prosperity has no doubt been the gold, which has yielded 306,512,479*l.* since 1851. These are eloquent figures, and as Australia becomes better known it is probable that the great emigration stream which is constantly flowing from over-crowded Europe will be directed towards Australasia."

The directing of such a colonizing stream to those parts of the Australian Continent, where millions of fertile acres are still unpeopled, will probably be the combined work of statesmanship, legitimate speculation, and philanthropy; and if the present supineness of the mass of people in England as to the great domain of Australasia is made to give way to advancing knowledge, something will have been effected towards securing increased prosperity both for these Colonies and the Mother Country.

DAN RYLANDS' CELEBRATED PATENT ECONOMICAL MINERAL WATER TRADE SPECIALITIES

Obtained the GOLD MEDAL at Edinburgh Exhibition, 1886.

Earlier Awards: Philadelphia, 1876; Melbourne, 1880—1; Calcutta, 1883—4; London, 1873; London, 1885; Vienna, 1873; Leeds, 1875.

Dan Rylands is now Sole Proprietor of the Works, Businesses, and Patent Rights of the Celebrated Firms of Codd & Rylands, Glass Bottle Manufacturers, and J. McEwen & Co., Mineral Water Engineers. Dan Rylands has had more experience than any other firm in the making of almost all Codd s Patent Bottles for the past twelve years having been made at Dan Rylands' Works, which are fitted up on a special principle for turning out extra strength of glass, for which the name of "Rylands" and "No. 4" are world-renowned.

GLOBE STOPPERED BOTTLES,

RYLANDS' CRYSTAL VALVE BOTTLE,
RYLANDS' RELIANCE and ACME BOTTLES,
RYLANDS' CODD'S BOTTLE,

WITH SPECIALLY SAFE GROOVE,

Are the best Mineral Water Bottles in the World.

PRICES NOW GREATLY REDUCED.

Dan Rylands' Gold Medal Economical Patent

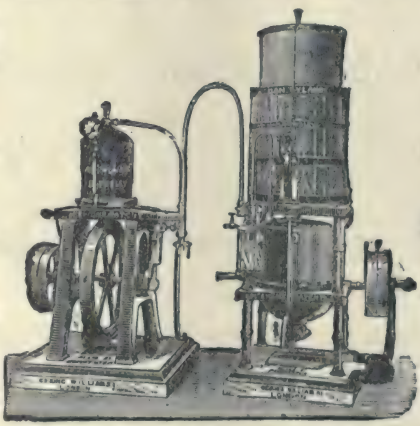
SODA WATER MACHINERY

Makes all kinds of Aerated Drinks of the highest class, and is gradually superseding all other systems on account of its thorough Efficiency, Simplicity, and Economy.

SAVES MATERIALS.

30 per cent. less acid and whiting required.

SAVES SPACE.



Only half the usual room is occupied.

SAVES LABOUR.

Owing to the automatic character of the machine.

SAVES TIME.

No attention required until charge is spent.

Dan Rylands'

RAPID PARAGON FILLER

Is the only Filler which has obtained Two Gold Medals.

OVER

2,500

SOLD.

Easiest Machine to keep in Repair.

SIMPLEST.
QUICKEST.
CHEAPEST.

RYLANDS' PATENT WIRE-BOUND BOXES ARE THE BEST.

Essences, Labels, and every Mineral Water Trade Requisite supplied.

In order to secure the genuine articles, indent your orders for DAN RYLANDS' SODA WATER BOTTLES, BOXES, OR MACHINERY. If other goods are offered, send your order direct.

DAN RYLANDS, BARNSLEY, ENGLAND.

TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESS: "RYLANDS, BARNSLEY." Catalogues Post Free.

☞ DAN RYLANDS is the BONA FIDE MANUFACTURER of Mineral Water Machinery, Bottles, and Boxes, a position of advantage not occupied by any other firm of Mineral Water Trade Appliance Suppliers; so that DAN RYLANDS can assure far more economy and satisfaction to buyers than any other firm.
